The New Philosophy.

THE grand systems controlled by intellectual development advance, not by sudden starts, but by a steady evolution. They are the growth of ages, not the inspiration of a single man. When the slow centuries have wrought the problem nearly through, the philosopher who can grasp their demonstration and detect its prophecy, appears to the world the discoverer; but it is the shoulders of the giant past on which he stands that make him seem less the dwarf.

Science has ever been rising to less material and simpler ideas. Little by little she has thrown aside the clumsy mechanism of the Ptolemaic system, and found that soul-expanding Nebular Hypothesis. We have no longer the goddess dwelling in every brook and tree, but a pure principle as the immaterial foundation of the universe; that a single active Force shaped our system, and still supports it down to the tiniest bit of microscopic life. This law is claimed to be the crowning discovery of time. It is no upstart, but the realization of the long forecastings of Nature's closest students. Especially within the last twenty-five years, one scientific man after another has caught the grand thought and proved it a grander fact. Europe, England and America, all claim its discovery; but its time had come; and we praise all, for each stood watching for God's "Let there be light."

A collection of the most popular and forcible essays on this subject has recently been published under the title of "Conservation and Correlation of Forces." The title states the whole theory. Its two principles are,—first: force, like matter, is indestructible; second: the various affections of matter, heat, light, electricity, &c., are but different manifestations of force, or modes of motion in the particles of matter, and convertible each into each. A common example illustrates this; the railway train. Heat produced from coal, is converted into the motion given the train; as this motion disappears, we have heat again, by the friction of the wheels or brakes. Here heat produces motion, and motion heat; moreover, the quantity of one is directly related to the quantity of the other. By most elaborate experiments motion is shown, further, to produce light, electricity, magnetism and chemical action. Each of these, in turn, is shown capable of producing each of the others. Force in one form disappearing, is found in another, and thus is never lost, correlation and conservation being mutually dependent. No one of these modes of motion, then, can be assumed as the original cause, but all must be carried back to one single Force, which in these forms keeps all creation up.

Though not yet complete, the theory is rapidly gaining strength, and authorities seem to agree in its universal acceptance. And to us, the merest smatterer in science, it is wonderfully fascinating, so beautiful and grandly simple; fit to stand with the other laws that rule God's universe. Its effect is "to divest physical science, as much as possible, of hypothetic fluids, ethers, latent entities, occult qualities, &c." How this clears the stumbling-blocks from our path of study! Of electricity, the greatest wonder was the subtle, all-pervading fluid; but we saw effects, and could not prove such was not the cause, any more than the book proved it was. Then its two forms; "fill a cart half full of dirt, and it is 'negative;' heap it on till it runs over, and it is 'positive;'" while to us it seemed dirt all the time. And heat, the mighty servant and terrible master, seemed stripped of all dignity, when it could be shut up "latent" in matter, ever opening and spreading, as steam. All through the book its demonstrations bring out so many flaws in the old theories, and are so attractive in the simplicity and completeness of their own proofs, that we wonder they were never thought of before. But enough. Nil nisi bonum of our studies past and gone, for they were truly beautiful.

This general law easily answers the question of perpetual motion. An ingenious American proposed to combine these interwoven modes of motion in a continual circuit, so as to make the engine supply its own heat and fuel, and by processes every step of which was known to be possible. What could spoil the plan? The boiler must expand by the heat; here was motion unapplied. The friction of every valve and gudgeon produces some heat; here was more motion lost. Some heat was radiated into space; and here, too, motion wasted. Heat converted into motion and back to heat again, can at best but re-produce itself, and such small leakages must waste the whole at last.

These views open a region wider and richer than any intellect has yet explored. The law grasps the very foundation of science. Its extent is boundless, reaching through matter into all organized being, up to intellectual, social, universal order. That clear thinker, Herbert Spencer, has given a most forcible exposition of this law, in his Philosophy.

All are familiar with the Nebular Hypothesis, now accepted by astronomers. It assumes that our whole solar system was originally a connected mass of uniform density and slow rotation, extending beyond the farthest planet. As ages wore away, this mass was gradually broken by attraction into bodies, finally condensed into our present planetary system. These cooled, giving a solid crust outside, the molten interior still bursting forth at times in volcanoes and earthquakes. This is the Geologist's creed respecting the earth. But it is calculated that the entire motion of our system is but a fraction of the original mechanical force of that immense nebulous mass. What has become of the rest? Our law answers, it is radiated in the forms of light and heat.

That true hero, George Stephenson, found in his black mines a beautiful idea; the heat given out from the coal we burn, is but the stored up sunshine that centuries ago built the forests now condensed into coal. A dream then, it is the world's truth now.

Our earth having cooled outside, its internal heat is virtually powerless. Therefore the agencies active on this globe, except tides, are caused by the solar radiations of light and heat. Physical Geography, Botany, Zoölogy, trace all natural phenomena to the sun's rays. From them arise winds, clouds, rain, grass, flowers, forests. Animal life is dependent on vegetable, and chemists tell us each complements the other, one's refuse being the other's support, as we see in the aquarium.

Physical causes excite sensations and emotions; sensations and emotions influence the will, the muscles, from the shiver of fear to the involuntary blow that levels a traitor. Physical causes work in the intellect; we know its activity varies with the purity and vigor of the blood that circulates in the brain; it is stimulated and maddened by alcohol or opium. Thus the sunbeams control the life and thoughts of man. From the union of individuals results society, governed in its being by the same laws. This, extended, is humanity, the grandest development on earth.

Here, then, is the mighty chain. Humanity made up of individuals; individuals influenced in thought, feeling, deed, by physical causes, supported by animal and vegetable life; these causes and this life springing from the sun's rays of light and heat; this light and heat the lost motion of the vast nebular ground-work of our solar system, urged on by pure Force; and Force is the Will of God.

Heroism.

To Plutarch, who is the historian of heroism, we owe the Brasidas, the Epaminondas, and the Scipio of old. In these we find a certain noble strain, as well as in the Dion and Laodamia of Wordsworth. Yet all of these ancient heroes, whom we look upon across the ages, with so much admiration, are examples of a rude heroism, which we are now prone to condemn. In their day, it was the highest type of manly daring to pursue the career of carnage and conflagration, without regard to human weal or woe. But we will not be too severe in censuring the deeds of heroes, which have been recited in all ages, for their deeds were, to say the least, in advance of the spirit of their age. Their courage and heroic daring we may well retain, while we regret their wanton cruelty. Although we cannot reverence the ancient hero as a demi-god, we will not be so unreasonable as to call him a demon. But coming to the present, we find that heroism has a higher and holier purpose, than merely to thunder at the gates of capitals, or to revel in scenes of carnage and bloodshed. Its duty is to undermine and destroy the systems of evil, which so glaringly prevail in our midst; to bear the torch of reform into the dark places of the earth, into the dens of misery and suffering, until it shall renovate and purify the tendencies of our fallen state. The evil which it combats, if checked in one direction, breaks out in another, and hence the contest goes on. This evil exists in high places and in low places, in church and in state, in private and in public; it exists everywhere, subverting the nobler aims of man. Towards all this external evil the man within the breast wages an interminable conquest, resolving never to desist until he has conquered. To this military attitude of the soul, we give the name heroism. In its purest condition, it is virtue militant. In any, it is human energy rising above inconvenience and the petty limitations, which seem to hedge in the powers of man. While virtue deliberates, weighs, and considers, heroism strikes directly at the attainment of the good, or the overthrow of the evil which is before it. Heroism is bold and defiant, but virtue is kind and forbearing. It questions with firm speech all institutions, observances, and customs, that it may discern the highest standard of truth and justice. It says to ostentatious splendor, vaunt not to me of your cold charities, your gifts ill-bestowed, because without heart. It says to timid and distrustful power, trouble not yourself with labyrinths of policy, but lend your strong arm for the amelioration of suffering and misery. Thus fearless, heroism weighs in its ready balances all custom and authority. Its spirit shall yet renovate the world. Before the calm earnestness of its gaze, shall wrong, oppression, and ignorance vanish, and a higher life shall irradiate the future page of the history of man. Because it feels and does not reason, it smites its adversary with exceeding precision and rapidity. This inward impulse, call it Will, if you please, which heroism obeys, sometimes runs counter to public opinion. The action which it prompts seem strange, until the tardy spirit of the age has overtaken it, but then nothing appears more consistent. The hero thus leading the van of progress and reform, and often outrunning his own age, is obliged to buffet the storm of contempt, and to be branded as a fanatic, until at last public opinion undeceived delights to do him honor. Self-trust is an important characteristic of heroism. It is a condition of the soul in its warlike attitude to external evil, and its ultimate end is the defiance of falsehood and wrong. The hero ever actuated by this feeling, is neither over-bearing, nor oppressive, but wishing to do no dishonor to the worthiness he has, he is temperate, just, and magnanimous. While he cares little for the jeers of wealth and nobility, or for the petty calculations and selfish whines of weak-minded men, he is neither ashamed nor afraid to condescend to men of low estate. His heart is open to the rich and the poor, to do impartial honor to their virtues. Nevertheless he stands upon the summit of the mountain, above the mists of the valley. Here he gazes upon the bickerings and party strife of his fellow-men, regardless of public opinion. Trusting in his own strength and rectitude, like Scipio who was charged with peculation, he refuses to do himself so great a disgrace as to wait for justification. He finds that virtue is enough. Taking this as his panoply, with calm self-trust, he strives to elevate the standard of right. Another characteristic of the hero is perseverance, which springs naturally from self-trust. Other men may be governed by changing impulses, and so continually shift in their opinions and actions, but he abides strictly by the part which he has chosen. Hence we shall find that at last he will reach the goal of success, although through the contempt of external good, he challenges public sentiment. Never calling up mistakes except to profit by their warning, but regarding his past action with the calmness of Phocion, he will triumph over every difficulty. Onward, onward to the future, is his watch-word. We need the manly self-trust, perseverance, and moral rectitude of the hero, that here and now we may lay the foundation of a strong and consistent character. The busy world of active life promises success to those alone, who are neither too timid nor indifferent to maintain their opinions. The truckling and temporizing policy of expediency may succeed for a moment, but in the end the persistent and heroic spirit of right will prevail. To-morrow the time-server will revel in his halls, in utter blindness to the moral of yesterday, and the next day he will have vanished and have been forgotten. But the hero who bids proud defiance to the hosts of evil, whose ear is bent to catch the feeblest wail of suffering humanity, and whose eye is intently fixed on the morning-star, which heralds a brighter day for the abject and down-trodden millions of earth, will be held in grateful and lasting remembrance.

The Nation's Dead.

We've sown the land with graves; and now we wait
  Upon the threshold of the Yet to be,
For God to open wide the tardy gate
  Of His unseen, untried futurity,
And give us our ripe fruit, a Nation Free.

And while we linger thus at Freedom's fane,
Hearing the sound of the retiring sea
Of war and passion, sacrifice and pain,
God's voice proclaims, "Ye shall not wait in vain."

But while we sit among the tombs and look
On to the glories which the morrow brings,
And fondly read from War's blood-hallowed book
Of broken chains, dead tyrants, humbled kings,
And while from darkness, hope prophetic springs,
We would not here forget the hearts that bled,
To whose cold arm the rising nation clings,—
We would not lose in Freedom's morning red,
Your deathless names, O, consecrated dead!

We gave you to country, in the beauty of manhood,
And your fame-scroll forbids a regret;
But the heart speaks aloud, when the reason is silent,
We cannot, we will not forget.
Ye went from us heroes, but come back to us ashes;
Or worse, perhaps never return:
But your dust still remains our immortal possession,
Though the foot of the foe treads the urn.

We gave you to death, for the truth of the nations;
Humanity bows at your graves.
We gave you to God, as a pledge of redemption,
A symbol of hope to the slave.

Proud Ransom of Freedom, oblation supernal!
Ye need no dumb record of stone.
Your sleep is as sweet as your fame is eternal,
Though ye sleep far away and alone.

Sleep, hero, sleep, thou art accepted now;
Earth has no more perplexities for thee.
The agonies that wrung thy war-worn brow
Have ope'd the door and set thy spirit free.

No more shall sufferings mock thee, when thou weepest,
Nor battle-tides roll up their darkening streams
To break thy rest at midnight when thou sleepest,
Or bring sad wakings from the realm of dreams.

Sleep, hero, sleep, for now the cannon's rattle
Has no foretastes of anguish in the sound:
Thy hands have fought their last, long, bloody battle;
Thy valor won its own immortal crown.

Around thy couch the white-robed hosts are bending;
  The Great Physician bids thee rest in peace;
While angel tongues with heavenly harps are blending
  To hail with joy the patriot's release.

What though the hands of war with gore are dyed?
  The path obscured with blood, where patriots go?
They find a home beyond the battle's tide,
  A recompense for every pang and woe.

What though their days are brief? their pleasures flee?
  What though their course is but a dying strife?
Time has no measure for eternity,
  And death no terrors for immortal life.

To God 'tis plain, but still to us it seemeth
  Almost unkind that they so soon are gone;
Except as through the tomb's dim portals streameth
  The light of Freedom's star to cheer us on.

That star is still bright, and our flag is still flying,
  The voice of deliverance is echoing near,
Though America weeps while her warriors are dying,
  And the cheeks of her fair are bedew'd with a tear.

Oh, grudge not a tear for the dead of the nation,
  God sanctifies grief at the patriot's urn:
The truest still long for the voice that is silent,
  And wait for the footsteps that never return.

The tears of free nations are tributes to valor,
  Immortal as truth is, sublime as the sea;
Give to kings and to despots the mockery of marble,
  But give to our dead the warm tear of the free.

And yet weep not as those who cannot smile.
There's joy in sinless grief; for while
The chastened nation makes its heroes' shrouds,
Star-throned Hope sits high above the clouds
Of human darkness, suffering and woe—
Above the reach of tears or tramp of foe,
And points to Freedom's unpolluted skies,
Where shine the fruits of our great sacrifice.
The fallen are not lost, who, fighting, fall
For God and country; though the heart may call
In vain for their return; and learn to know
The strong, deep passion of a nation's woe;
They are not dead, but sleeping in their graves:

Death is not death to heroes, but to slaves.
Be comforted, ye mourners, fond and fair,
Whose early days have seen the war-tide where
Your hopes of youth and pledge of love so soon
Have sunk in blood, before life's rising noon.
Rejoice that ye are worthy thus to stand
And suffer, godlike, for a suffering land,
Where purity and strength shrink not from pain,
But welcome woe, before the tyrant's chain.
And ye, fond mothers, who lone vigils keep,
Beside the speechless monuments where sleep
Your loved ones, bow reverently, and say,
It is not so with spirit, but with clay.
And thou, O, traitor, who hast darkly stood
And slaked thy passion in thy country's blood,
Look on the faces of our dead, alone
In their uncoffined glory, battle-strown,
And read in their red wounds and conquering path,
The waking vengeance of a patriot's wrath.

The centuries are ripe. The future now
  Is waiting here for Freedom's hands to reap
The harvest of the world. And while we bow
  In our great sorrow, asking peace and sleep,
  And while the strong are brave, and while the tender weep,
The dead are speaking, bidding us be strong,
  Nor lose the trust their blood has given to keep,
But calmly wait, although the night is long,
  For morn will break at last and bring immortal song. J. B.

The Character and Policy of Abraham Lincoln.

As the last college term was drawing to its close, our hearts were gladdened by the news of Richmond's fall, and the surrender of the main rebel army, with its most brilliant yet wicked and guilty chieftain. Then did these halls ring with our shouts and hurrahs; then did our grateful voices go up in silent prayer to the Preserver of the Republic. It was, indeed, fitting for us then to rejoice as we beheld through the rifts of the dark war-cloud the bright and brightening skies beyond. But how soon were we called down from the high mountains of our mirth into the dark valleys of mourning! The beginning of the vacation found us all anticipating gay times, yet before its fifth sun rose there came a great and saddening change for all. Our Chief Magistrate had fallen—not by sudden accident, nor by slow disease—not by any natural or common cause of dissolution, but by the cowardly and cruel hand of an assassin, inspired with the barbarous spirit of Slavery and Treason.

Thus did God lead us in the mysteries of his unknown path.

We do not attempt an eulogy on the character of one whose fame no eulogy can reach; it is our purpose to enumerate the principal traits which make up the character of Abraham Lincoln; to review briefly the policy of his Administration, and gather the few consolations which seem to be left us now the good man has gone.

Abraham Lincoln was born of humble origin, and his early life was one of hard physical toil. His education was exceedingly limited, he having little time for private study and few opportunities for attending school. Neither wealth nor wealthy friends were ever his. His acquirements were the result of his own industry and labor. Lincoln passed the most of his life in private pursuits—the period of six years embracing the limits of his public labors. But this short period was long enough to unfold his noble character. The nature of the civil and political contests which have arisen within the period of his public life, and in which he has been the chief actor, was such as to keep him constantly before the eyes of the people. They knew his character as they have seldom before known the character of their Chief Magistrate. So honest was he in his dealings; so single in his purposes, and so plain-spoken in all his declarations, that there is but one testimony in regard to it.

No man at any time ever distrusted Abraham Lincoln in any act, or impugned any of his motives. He was honest. He had the confidence of his bitterest political enemies, and his foes in arms could rely upon his word. His rigid, simple honesty, elicited the admiration of friend and foe alike. In his hands were the liberties of a great people and the destinies of a great nation. Who in all history ever held a greater trust, and yet, who ever held a trust more safely and more securely? At his command was the most powerful army the world has ever seen, and yet, when did it strike a single unlawful or unjust blow? When was it ever put to a selfish purpose?

It becomes us also to remember that President Lincoln was an honest man when honest men were few. Suppose his predecessor had been in his place—a man noted for the opposite of political honesty. Where would loyalty be? Where would our liberties be?

Where would be our national glory and our republican government? In the hour of our peril it is well that we had an honest man at the head to control affairs.

Lincoln was also a true man. He was always true to the best interests of his government. He never forgot the oath he took to support it, nor, remembering it, did he ever set it aside for the sake of convenience or of policy. Neither paltry political policies nor selfish purposes could blind him to the best interests of the Union. In all times, and in all places, he has done that, and only that, which was positively for its welfare and its permanence. He was elected to the office of President by a strong political party which disbelieved in the extension of Slave Territory. Surely Slavery has not gained much under his administration! Unlike his predecessor, he did not turn his back to his friends, nor disown the party which placed him in power. President Lincoln was true to his principles and to his party.

Himself of humble origin and a poor man, he was friendly to the poor and humble. The dignity of the high office which he held was nothing to him. He was always the same true friend of the unfortunate, whether in the Executive's mansion or under his own humble roof in the West. Wherever he was, in whatever condition of life, he seemed to regard his fellow men as equals, and to act upon the principle that neither office nor fame could add anything to manhood.

When colored gentlemen availed themselves of their privilege to call upon him at his public receptions, he always received them gladly, and it was always impossible for any one to discover that he considered them black. Lincoln was true to the black race. He acted for their interests while other men merely talked: while others proposed, he executed. When asked to recall his Emancipation Proclamation by a Border State Senator, said President Lincoln, "My word is out to this people, and I can't take it back." He was not the man to desert a good principle once embraced. He always moved onward, right onward, for liberty, justice, and humanity.

Faithful to man, he was also faithful to God. Mr. Lincoln was a Christian man. He looked to God for guidance, and both privately and publicly acknowledged His hand in events. No one, we think, can read the speech which he delivered on leaving Springfield, without being convinced that it came from a Christian heart. "In the Almighty Being I place my reliance for support; and I hope you, my friends, will all pray that I may receive that divine assistance, without which I cannot succeed, but with which success is certain."

Who but a sincerely Christian man would have made so publicly such a request? What a contrast it presents with the infidelity and godlessness which so frequently pervades political circles and characterizes our leading politicians! President Lincoln never was ashamed to ask the people to pray forhim. Their God was his God.

His Inaugural has the following words:—"I place my whole reliance in God, knowing that all will go well, and that He will decide for the right." Here is the evidence of a Christian's trust. His frequent proclamations for days of "fasting, humiliation, and prayer," indicate the strength of his religious greatness and purpose. Here are his public Confessions of Faith, and by these we know that he was not only a providential but also a Christian man. He was shot in a theater; but how does this show, as some would have it, that he was not a Christian man? He may not have been so strict in regard to his Christian principles as we rigid New Englanders would have had him. He may have fallen short of our Puritan ideas as to what a Christian should be and do. It is not for us to judge. It was very well said by a Boston clergyman that a "patriot in the theater is better than a copperhead in the pulpit."

Mr. Lincoln was a pure man. His habits were as pure in the last years of his life, when he had mingled with the coarseness and vulgarity of the world, as were they in youth and in manhood. He was a slave to no vice, and he was the master of his passions. He was a strictly temperate man, and it is certain that he did his best to prevent intemperance in the army and among the political officers which surrounded him in the capital. He was pure-minded. A very wrong idea seems to pervade the public mind in regard to this. It is true that he was fond of telling stories, but they were always pure and honorable. Many of the anecdotes which have been ascribed to him by the press are not from his lips. He never descended to low illustrations to enforce a theory, or for entertainment. He was by nature a melancholy man, accustomed to sit in gloom, as though the path of his life was darkened by an unwelcomed shadow. His shrewdness at repartee, his felicity in story-telling, his pleasantness in illustration, and his fondness for mirth, are the compensations which Nature gave him for a sad and sorrowing heart.

Although his moral surpassed, perhaps, his intellectual greatness, yet of the latter he had much. Senator Trumbull, while speaking of Mr. Lincoln's abilities, pronounced him a "giant, without the prefix 'Little,' in intellect as well as in statue." This may be extravagant, but of this much we are certain, that his reasoning was logical, his expression clear, and his style without fault in its beautiful simplicity; that he was far-sighted, sagacious, and penetrating; that his mind was comprehensive and well disciplined to perform the gigantic yet intricate labors which his high office required.

Mr. Lincoln was not an ambitious man. He never sought a political office. He entered with zeal many a political campaign, but never for personal motive or for fame. Though, like all men, he was not indifferent to earthly honors, yet he always "claimed in every contest to be actuated by something higher than an anxiety for office." When he was candidate for President, he told his friends "to drop every paltry and insignificant thought for any man's success." Thus he placed principles higher than men, and strove as a politician to establish principles rather than elevate men. When informed of his nomination for a second term in the Presidential office, he said, "I cannot say that I wish to perform the duties of President for four years more, yet I desire an approval of the people for what I have already done." Thus it was not office which he sought so much as to know that the great trust which the people had confided in him had by him been faithfully kept.

Mr. Lincoln was a persevering man. He was always willing to hear both sides of every question, and cheerfully examined lengthy documents, in order to rightly ascertain the object of his inquiry. He would physically suffer in order that he might not err in forming his estimation of character. He necessarily relied considerably upon the representations of others, but always less than most other Executives, and never when there were other means of ascertaining the truth. He hesitated at nothing when he saw the right, and when once on that road, no power could force him to retrace his steps. He never despaired of the Republic, even in its darkest days. When the hearts of other men were failing them for fear of evil things which might befall us, his trust was unshaken, and his faith for our success was perfect. He was self-reliant—never asking advice, yet he was always ready to receive it. Never possessing the necessary qualifications of a party leader, yet he led his party as perhaps no other man could.

Mr. Lincoln was a kind man. There was no element or feature of tyranny in his nature. Never were words more wrongly applied than were those used by his cowardly assassin, "Sic semper tyrannis," as he jumped upon the stage of the theater, from the scene of his bloody act. He always hated to use power, and always used it reluctantly. He never injured a human being by the exercise of power. His sympathy for the unfortunate was great, and his love for his enemies was strong. His letter to the mother who had lost five sons in the army, shows an intensity of feeling which never was possessed before by any ruler in any land.

"With malice toward none and charity for all," he performed his duties as President, and used the powers of his office as few other men would have done, in his place.

The wisdom of the policy of his Administration cannot be ascertained except by measuring the difficulties which it has overcome. It was embarrassed at its very commencement as no other Administration had been. The one which preceded it was weak and corrupt. Treason had been openly at work within its very bosom. There was no money in the Treasury; no arms within the reach of the War Secretary; and our navy was scattered abroad in the most distant ports. Every department was filled with traitors, and it was easier to find a traitor than a loyal man, in Washington. Officers were constantly resigning, and it was difficult to select the loyal. Around him there were traitors; behind him there were thousands of misguided partisans who were traitors; and in his front were rebels in arms. The national flag was torn down, and there was no power at hand with which to raise it.

England and France were against us, under the guise of a neutrality which meant nothing less than "Sneering at freedom and sending arms to tyrants."

In such circumstances was the nation placed when President Lincoln began to administer affairs.

At first he tried persuasion and argument. Then when he saw that force was necessary in order to restore the property and honor of the nation, unhesitatingly he called for troops to accomplish this purpose. Untiringly and unceasingly he devoted himself to the cause of his country while he was living, and as his eyes were closing in death, they beheld the golden harvest of his brilliant labors. He saved a nation.

What glory that is of earth can be more enduring than his!

When President Lincoln came into office, he recognized his obligation to return fugitive slaves, and he also disclaimed the right to interfere with Slavery in the States. He faithfully pursued this policy so long as he could without endangering the nation's interest; and when it demanded an opposite policy, he fearlessly issued a Proclamation, the like of which, in its sweeping power, and power for good, no Executive of this country, or ruler of any other country, ever had the opportunity and the sagacity to proclaim—declaring Slavery forever at an end. He then employed the negroes which he had thus set free, as soldiers, and put upon them the military uniform of the United States. Thus from slaves he made black men freedmen; from freedmen he made soldiers; and as soldiers he labored to secure for them all the privileges of citizenship. He freed a race.

What deed for good can be more wide spread!

He delivered four millions of bondmen from bondage, and in their prosperity through all coming time will they remember Abraham Lincoln as their Preserver.

He saved the nation, and the nation will not forget his name until it shall have forgotten its great and its good.

To Abraham Lincoln and to his fame, the manner of his death is as nothing. To the nation it is the most appalling of crimes. For its causelessness and for its heinousness, it is a crime surpassed only by the Crucifixion itself. By it the Nation lost its Executive—the people their ruler—the poor and the unfortunate their friend—the bondman his preserver.

But amid all our grief we have some consolations.

His death was not in vain.

It strengthened the hearts and feelings of the people as nothing else could have done.

It awakened their minds to a stricter idea of national justice.

It evinced the strength of plain Republican Government. Our Chief Magistrate suddenly fell, but the wheels of the Government did not stop. There was no dispute as to a successor, and no blood required to place him in power.

It crushed out the last spark of sympathy with the rebels on the part of foreign powers.

It awakened all men to a proper estimation of the virtues of Abraham Lincoln, and inspired all with a spirit of investigation into the life and character of a truly great man.

F. W. K.

and we who have now learned the value of our institutions, will look back with greater reverence than ever before upon our Revolutionary fathers, and will regard with deeper interest everything connected with their names, and about the simple subject of our narrative there will cluster a deeper and deeper interest as the years go by, because through it a hero of the Revolution is presented vividly to us, and those traits of his character for which he was most noted are plainly marked out.

The Close of Winter.

MOURNFULLY sigh the leafless limbs,
Swayed by the cold, bleak gale,
And the tree-tops bend low beneath the blast,
Which o'er valley and hill sweeps madly past;—
'Tis the winter's dying wail.

White, cheerless frost each pane bedims,
Darkening every home,
And the traveler fights with a bitter foe,
As he battles his way against the snow
Which ere long may be his tomb.

The lark through the air no longer skims,
Ushering in the day,
And the low, sweet lament of the nightingale
Is wafted no more on the evening's gale;—
All the birds are far away.

The demons of death are chanting hymns,
Shouting victorious lays;
For all nature is shrouded in a winter's night,
And no warm, grateful sunbeams our hearts delight;—
On a desolate world we gaze.

For three long months of tedious gloom,
The poor, for whom there is no room
On earth's broad face, with footsteps sad
Have wandered through the streets unclad,

Unhappy, chilled in every vein,
Sustaining that most horrid bane,
Necessity. How few of those
Who now in affluence repose
Can estimate the woes which fall
In winter upon those who call
The sky their shelter from the storm!
The man who cowers near the warm
And cheerful fire, heeds not the sigh,
Attends not to the bitter cry
Of children walking in the snow;
Bare-footed, friendless, forth they go,
With misery clothed, to groan and bleed.
To some, stern winter is indeed
A cruel king!

Hark! how clearly the chimes
Of the sleigh-bells resound,
And how tuneful their rhymes,
As the steeds paw the ground!
Oh! merry, merry, merry 'tis to fly o'er meadows white,
When the glistening stars are paling 'neath the full moon's mellow light,
When the pulse beats fast and faster, and the heart is all delight.

Hear the ringing of the ice,
As the skaters dart along;
How they vanish in a trice,
In a far-extending throng!
And swiftly, very swiftly now the youths and maidens fair,
Nor betraying aught of sorrow, nor revealing aught of care,
Hand in hand are gliding on, while joyous accents fill the air.

See the radiance of the flames
In the fireplace antique,
And the mirthful, festive games
Reddening every youthful cheek!
Oh! the winter, yes, the winter, though its hurricanes be drear,
Though its mien may be forbidding, and its visage most severe,
Is to very many far the happiest season of the year.

Plaintively sigh the leafless limbs,
Swayed by the zephyr's wing,
And the murmuring brooklets court the breeze
Which gently sweeps through the forest trees;—
'Tis the song of the coming spring.

And the birds now returning are singing hymns,
Warbling melodious lays,
For all nature revives as the vernal days near,
And each creature that breathes, as the buds re-appear,
Pays its tribute of joyful praise. C. S. E.

Milton in his Old Age.

"The prerogative of true greatness is to glorify itself in adversity."—Chalmers.

"THE flower of youth," and "the vigor of manhood," are familiar phrases in song and story, but poets and historians have found little of beauty or greatness in "crude old age." Yet if we would know Milton the Christian, the patriot, the poet, we must view him, not in his youth or manhood, but in his declining years. His early life is interesting only as the preparation for his good old age. In his youth he conceived a love of "beholding the bright countenance of truth, in the quiet and still air of delightful studies." Meditation in solitude was ever his chief delight, yet he was cheerful and light-hearted. At home, at College, at Horton, he was always happy.

"Life went a Maying
With Nature, Hope, and Poesy,
When he was young."

Knowing nothing of the busy world, he cared for it less, and was content to let his young imagination soar aloft on giddy wings, sometimes to bring back from the realms of fancy a beautiful "Comus" or "Lycidas." But this was not often; the poet was but forming.

His happy youth was soon gone, and seeing the necessity of a practical knowledge of the world, he set out to visit foreign lands. He passed through France and Italy, where he was received with marks of distinction, and paused at Naples. There he heard the fearful news of a civil war in England. He was a Republican, and his heart was with Cromwell; so he forthwith abandoned his travels, set sail for England, forsook the muses, and became a leading actor in the great rebellion, using the powerful weapons which God had given him,—a mighty intellect and ready pen. He engaged in controversy with the most learned scholars of his age, (and "there were giants in those days,") and became known throughout Europe as an enthusiastic and ambitious politician, and a most severe and witty controvertist. He raised himself to the position of Latin Secretary under Cromwell, and at this time wrote to a friend, "I am meditating, by the help of Heaven, an immortality of fame. Πτεροφυῶ! I am letting my wings grow and preparing to fly!" Alas, for the political ambition of Milton's manhood! It was doomed to disappointment.

His vigorous manhood was thus spent in the blaze of public life, but his severe study and unremitting exertion began at length to tell upon his system, and at forty-six he was blind. Blindness was the first mark of withering old age. It came upon him gradually, until noonday was as midnight; but as the light of earth faded away, the brighter light of Heaven shone in upon his soul. "O, happiness of blindness!" Sight departed and gave way to faith. One "veil of flesh" was gone. Having lost sight of the visible, he approached and communed with the invisible, and it was this sacred communion that wrought within him the spirituality which, entering into the poems of his old age, has made his name immortal; it was "the golden key that opes the palace of eternity," by which he was permitted to behold the mysteries of Heaven and Hell, the angel host, and "gorgons, hydras, and chimeras dire," which he has described in his "Epic vision of the unborn."* Often and devoutly had he prayed that the seraphim might come with the hallowed fire to purify his lips for the utterance of truth. His prayer was heard; the seraphim came, but in the form of blindness; and from the lips thus purified came Paradise Lost.

The work of old age once begun, was not abandoned. Soon following blindness came infirmity and lingering disease. He who was once called "the beautiful lady of Christ's College," is now a wrinkled old man, with silvered locks and tremulous voice. His brow is contracted with pain, and his eyes, "though clear to outward view of blemish or of spot," roll as if vainly searching for the light. Sad change of a few years! But though Milton's body had grown old and helpless, his mind was stronger and more vigorous than ever. He was "perfected by feebleness, and irradiated by obscurity." His words were not the mumbled accents of second childhood, but the counsels of a wise and venerable man. At the age when other men grow simple, he became profound. Such was Milton, "a worm in body, but in mind a god," in old age, when others are "poor human ruins, tottering o'er the grave."

*It is almost awful to think of him, issuing from the arena of controversy, victorious and blind, putting away from his dark brows the victorious laurels,—left alone after the heat of the day, by those for whom he had combated,—and originating in that enforced dark silence, his epic vision of the unborn."—Mrs. Browning.

Blindness and infirmity! Surely these afflictions were enough to embitter the old age of Milton; but no, his heart beat as warmly and his life was as cheerful as ever. Then, in the train of physical suffering, came the blighting sorrows of adversity—disappointment, neglect, and persecution. The schemes of his manhood, with all his ambitious hopes, were swept away. He saw the free commonwealth, which he had helped to build, torn down by ruthless royal hands. Cromwell had fallen, and a Stuart had rebuilt and usurped the throne which Milton had fondly hoped was crushed forever. Many of his former associates had perished by the hand of the tyrant, Charles; others lay in dreary cells, inviting death; still more were seeking refuge in foreign lands; the rest had either forsaken Liberty, or had become fanatics in her cause. He heard the cruel "act of oblivion," ("the most unkindest cut of all,") pronounced upon all the generous labor of his manhood. His works were ordered to be publicly burned by the common hangman. He was openly and shamefully disgraced, and was compelled, even in his infirm old age, to conceal himself, to escape the fury of those who were once proud to call themselves his friends. Nor was the state alone in its cruelty. His associates in religion, the Presbyterians, whom he had once loved and defended, now turned their backs upon him. Church and state, alike inconstant, united their efforts to injure him who had once been their favorite. This ingratitude seems to have affected Milton more than all his bodily afflictions. "I presented," he mournfully writes, "the fruits of my private studies to the church and state, for which I was recompensed only by impunity."

We pity Milton in his sorrowful old age, yet he claims our admiration and our envy, rather than our pity, for he was purified by trial. Now, in his blind, infirm, forsaken old age,—now, and never before, do we behold the Christian, the patriot, the poet, Milton. Now we see his noble nature rising above affliction, "rousing itself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking its invincible locks."

God tries man's virtue by adversity.
"Prosperity conceals his brightest ray;
As night to stars, woe lustre gives to man."

The more fully Milton realized the vanity of earthly joys, the more closely did his heart take hold upon eternal realities, despising all empty traditions and ceremonies, ascending far above all sect and denomination. Though he had been a Puritan in his youth, and a Presbyterian in his manhood, he was now neither Puritan nor Presbyterian. The former church had run stark mad, the latter was no better; so he left them both. Because in his old age he identified himself with no religious denomination, the sectarian Christians of his day heaped upon him such vile epithets as "infidel," "apostate," "fanatic," "heretic." But he bore their abuse with that humility which "doth sleep while the storm grows hoarse with scolding." The religion of his old age was not in all points orthodox, but we may easily overlook a few errors in the creed of a Christian of the dark day of Milton. "Charity suffereth long and is kind." Whatever his "heresy" may have been, it was not rendered odious by publicity. His religion no longer stood with a loud trumpet at the corners of the streets, but was secluded in the sanctuary of an adoring heart, and nourished by constant secret communion with the Great Head of the Church. Though a despiser of sect, he was still the champion of true religion, and some of his last works were dedicated to the Church. "I write," he said, "from an inward persuasion of Christian duty, which I may usefully discharge to the common Lord and Master of us all." Shame on the Pharisee who could charge infidelity and apostasy upon such a man! If this be infidelity, if this be apostasy, then Heaven is full of infidels and apostates! Let his accusers consider the calm, Christian spirit of his declining years, and blush for their injustice. Amid all his sorrows, he never uttered a word of complaint. He was "content, though blind," infirm, and forsaken. In each new trial he recognized the chastening hand of God, and, responding "Thy will be done!" suffered it to draw him nearer Heaven, knowing that his present afflictions would in the end work out for him "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." The lofty pride of his manhood had now departed, but there came instead, to dwell in the temple of his soul, the lovely spirit of humility. To be good and to do good, was now his sole desire; therefore we find him, in his old age, deeply interested in the education of the young. The haughty Secretary of Cromwell, the epic bard, with whose praises "all Europe rang from side to side," now condescended to write a Latin Grammar for children, and an elementary book of Logic, for youth. How noble Milton appears in this humble work! Let no one say that such humility is but another name for the simplicity of second childhood.

Nay, rather it is a drawing near to the feet of Him who humbled Himself among men, and went about doing good. In Milton's own words, it is "that lowly loftiness of mind which is exalted by its own humiliation."

The religion of his last years made Milton a tender, loving husband and father. It was a most thorough reformation, for in his manhood he was reproved as "a harsh and choleric man at home," and one of his antagonists thus boldly and in part truthfully accused him, "you throw aside your wife, because your waspish spirit could not agree with her qualities, and your crooked phantasy could not be brought to take delight in her." In view of these charges, it is no wonder that the fireside of Milton was cheerless, no wonder that his daughter grew up "unkind and undutiful." The work of reparation now began. He brought his religion to his home, and there, in the family circle, yearning for domestic happiness, he became (in the words of his daughter,) "a delightful companion, the life of the conversation." He loved the wife of his declining years, and speaks of her as a "gentle, virtuous, and attached companion." He loved his daughters, and mourned over their ingratitude, chiding them tenderly, but sometimes driven to severe reproof. Thus did the religion of his old age penetrate every corner of his heart. It was sublime, yet humble. What better comment could be made upon his character as a Christian?

The crowning glory of Milton in his old age, was his patriotism. He had been a follower of Cromwell, in the victorious days of the commonwealth; he now led the "forlorn hope" of Freedom, in the dark days of "the Restoration." Discouragement and persecution could not move him from his devotion to Liberty. He continued to be in his declining years what he had ever been, a Republican; an advocate of regicide; an enemy of persecution and tyranny in every form, social, civil, and religious; "the man who never quailed before a tyrant, or bowed before a mob." But while his zeal for liberty was undiminished, it no longer manifested itself (as in his earlier life,) in angry discussion. The same influences which had so affected his character as a Christian, softened the spirit of his patriotism. His love of strife, defiant manner, and bitter hatred, all departed with the ambitious dreams of his manhood. A melancholy spirit pervades all the political works of his last years, but now and then the fierce energy of his manhood bursts forth in stinging invective and caustic sarcasm, which, set in the midst of his melancholy earnestness, appears like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." This shows that the hot fires that had once raged so furiously and sent forth their red forked flames against tyranny, were only smouldering in the ashes of his old age. Nothing but the grave could utterly quench them. But these passionate outbursts are not frequent. The distinguishing characteristic of his last political writings, is subdued earnestness. The lofty views and imaginative creed of Milton's manhood were now gone. He had written "the last words of expiring Liberty," and despaired of seeing, in his day, the firm establishment of his ideal commonwealth; yet he still continued to fight for liberty, striving successfully to weaken the chains by which the tyrant bound his people; and he continued to use his mighty pen against the king, until his hand was cold in death. Such was Milton in his old age, in the character of a patriot.

The life of Milton, as a poet, may be divided into two periods, that of youth and old age, between which intervened a score of years, when the singing robes of the bard were entirely laid aside for the armor of the patriot. In the period of his youth, we find him a light-hearted poet, inexperienced in life, his young mind warped by the beauties of phantasy, and devoted to ideal themes, his rhythm clear and musical as a mountain rill. In the period of his old age, we find him a calm "priest of Nature," with a long experience of joys and sorrows, more practical in the choice of themes than in his youth, more devoted to philosophy and "sound, round-about common sense," less beautiful in diction, less flowing in rhythm,—in fine, caring more for the useful than the agreeable. To the latter period belong Paradise Lost, Paradise Regained, and Sampson Agonistes. So widely do these poems differ from those of his youth, that it is hard to recognize in them the hand of the same author, save when we witness his familiar imagination soaring aloft, and "like an eagle, kindling its undazzled eyes at the full mid-day beam." It is the same imagination, burdened with a long and sorrowful experience. These poems were written at that time in life "when images of tenderness and beauty fade," yet their beauty and tenderness are unsurpassed. In sublimity of conception, combined with simplicity of expression, they are unequalled.

Paradise Lost is the first work of Milton's old age, and, therefore, the first of his works that bears the mark of the spirituality and heavenly insight which were the fruits of his blindness and infirmity. It is his masterpiece; that work to which he had looked forward longingly for many years, as "not to be raised from the heat of youth, or the vapors of wine," but reserved for his sober old age. It is the perfection of dignified beauty, the Apollo among poems. Well might Dryden say, after reading it, "This man cuts us all out, and the ancients too."

Paradise Regained, written five years later, shows plainly the marks of advancing age. Its beauties are not so striking as those of Paradise Lost, but it contains more sound argument and lofty truth. We miss here the studied beauty of his earlier poems. The aged bard seems, at this time, to have expressed the sober, sometimes homely truths, which lay nearest his heart, in the graceful metre which was natural to his poetical nature.

Sampson Agonistes, the last great work of the poet, is a tragedy, suggested doubtless by the sufferings and blindness of the author. Upon this short poem Milton has stamped his personality more than upon all others. It contains no beauty (such as we find in his earlier poems) borrowed from the pages of Homer, or Shakspeare, or Spencer, but it is the ripe fruit of Milton's own brain. It is an index to his character in his declining years. Harmonious, plain, pervaded by a melancholy sweetness, it is nevertheless a dignified poem, written in the spirit of the ancients, by one of "lofty step and Epic air."

Let Comus be taken as a type of the poems of Milton's youth, and it may be represented as a careless, graceful schoolboy, tripping lightly on his way; while Sampson Agonistes, the type of his later poems, is an armored knight, advancing with a stern and ringing tread. The former poem is "pulchrum," the latter is "dulce."

The prose writings of Milton's old age are radically different in style from those of his youth. They resemble the orations of Demosthenes, abounding in intricate constructions and long sentences,—the natural and proper expression of deep thought, but stumbling-blocks to the superficial reader. The charge of obscurity has been brought against these later works, and one transcriber has been so presumptuous as to shorten the sentences, and, in many cases, change the construction, for the sake of perspicuity! A foul literary murder! He whose heart is in sympathy with that of Milton, can easily understand his most intricate sentence; but a grovelling intellect cannot fathom the proper expression of a profound mind. The grandeur of Milton's old age soars aloft, and he who would catch it must have wings. It is, therefore, no surprising fact, that his last prose works are read only by men of deep thought and earnest study.

The fact that the noblest works of Milton, both prose and poetical were written in his last, sorrowful years, is the best proof that he was great, for "the prerogative of true greatness is to glorify itself in adversity, and perform noble deeds in time of persecution." These works of his old age are to-day helping to mould the character of the whole civilized world. His last poems are the wonder and admiration of all who love the grand and beautiful. Quoted at the fireside, in the pulpit, and on the rostrum, they exert an influence greater than that of the living bard. They are a model for the young, and a solace for the aged. The political works of his old age are fingerboards to liberty, dear to every freeman. To these noble efforts of his declining years the people of England owe, in a great degree, the partial liberty which they enjoy in a monarchy to-day. An English writer in the Atlantic Monthly says, "In England the party of Cromwell and Milton still lives," advancing the principles of liberty, and sympathizing with the down-trodden of every land. The theological works of Milton's old age are studied and admired by all who can appreciate an eclectic creed, called by no sectarian name, but enriched by truths sifted from every formula. His treatise of "True Religion," though written two centuries ago, is used by Christians of the present day as a most powerful weapon against popery and fanatacism.

Milton is "immortal though no more." The works of his own age are a monument to his own age, "more lasting than chiselled marble and moulded brass." They will live on in the hearts of men, when the productions of his early years are all forgotten. Men will even delight to couple the name of Milton the Christian, with that of Luther, of Milton the patriot with that of Cromwell; but as a poet he must stand alone, with no compeer. His religion, his patriotism, his poetry, will live while time endures. J. D. B.

Darling versus Putman.

The well known boating enthusiasm of Yale is sufficient warrant for my present purpose. In a boat race, the strength, symmetry, and endurance of the rival crews—but before I proceed further let me correct an error prevalent not among collegians, but among the people at large. I have often heard it said, that the boating men of a College were men of muscle but not of mind. However this slander originated, whether in ignorance or envy, I feel justified in saying that it is none the less a slander. To refute it by demonstrative reasoning is unnecessary, for it can be overthrown by moral proof. I challenge any skeptic to examine the boating calendar of Yale or Harvard, together with the literary and scholastic records. Having perfect confidence in the result of such a comparison, I beg pardon for mentioning the matter, and begin my sentence again.

As I was about to say, in a boat race, the strength, symmetry and endurance of the rival crews, shown in the encounter for an uncertain victory, awaken our interest, admiration and sympathy; and when the winning boat comes in, friends and foes cheer vigorously. Such a contest I propose to describe; a race which was rowed on the Monongahela river in 185–.

At four o'clock the crowd began to gather "A very torrent of man" flowed toward the water, covered the suspension bridge, the steamboats which were lying in the stream, and the upper end of the broad levee or quay. The Monongahela House and the stores along the quay shone with brighter colors and happy faces.

It was Saturday afternoon in October, with a mild breeze ruffling the broad surface of the water; and as the gaily painted barges, with dripping oars, flashed round the point from the Alleghany into the Monongahela, or shot down from under the arches of the bridge, and boats with white sails ran over the water as if they were alive, the dark smoke which is wont to overhang the "Iron City," seemed to rise and float away and leave everything smiling in the sunlight.

As I looked on the scene then, and remember it now, beauty, poetry and music were all mingled in it. On the left bank, steep high bluffs shut in the view, but down the river lay the vale of the Ohio; hill-land and plain-land, woods and pasture, tinted with autumnal hues, and stretching out to the horizon's edge. While close at hand the pure sunlight flashed merrily on the ripples, on the white sails of the pleasure boats and the surges, and on the gay uniforms of crews prying arrowy shells through the water with easy swiftness, the very poetry of motion. Expanse, land and water, fixed and moving objects, alternating color, human life,—all blended and harmonized,—filled the soul with a sense of freedom and beauty.

Then the oars clinked in the row locks with a measured cadence, making the rhythm of the syllabic, time-keeping oars. Each boat was a ringing line of poetry, the whole regatta a complete poem; not a stately Epic, but a quick, lively, joyous Dythrambic.

Merry peals of laughter, and cheers for favorite boats, came from the vast crowd, and ringing over the water were flung back again by the bold bluffs. Now and then an enthusiastic crew broke into a boating chorus. Such music may be rude, but it is sweet and exciting, and dearly thought of and longed for by all who have heard it.

In the long, lower room of an old warehouse on the quay, turned bottom upwards, and shining with a coat of oil, lay the Putman, then the champion of the Western rivers; beside it the wheeled carriage to carry it to the water, and the men of muscle who were that day to sustain or lose its preëminence.

Dressed in white flannel, crimson barred, with a jamoty "cap o'blue" on his head, stood Glave Bonnafon, the stroke, talking in a low tone with the remainder of the crew. The muscles of his magnificent arm showed their shape and size through the tightly fitting shirt, and the strength of a giant seemed sleeping in his immense back.

Laid gently on the carriage and supported by the crew, the shell was carefully moved down the quay, through the opening crowd, and quickly launched. The oarsmen at their oars, the nimble little coxswain gave the orders. With a cheer from the by-standers the Putman glided off to take her place for the start.

As she neared the suspension bridge, a long, gracefully formed, cedar shell, with crew modestly attired in white flannel with red caps, slowly floated from under one of the arches. A cheer came immediately from those on the bridge and in the surrounding boats. It was the "Darling," about to try her first race. The oarsmen seemed slighter than those in the Putman, but every muscle and sinew of theirs had been tried and hardened: the old man who held the tiller ropes carried skill which more than balanced his extra weight, and all were resolved to win fame for the Darling—the namesake of a fair lady who had placed their caps of red, and sent them out to do battle on the water.

It is nearly time for the start. A man on the second pier of the bridge throws a rope to the Darling and one to the Putman. These the coxswains hold, and let their boats float down as far as the cords will permit.

"Are you all ready?" cries a man with a watch in his hand, standing on the railing. "Aye, aye, Sir." "Then give way!" As the shells spring to the start, under the influence of the swift strokes, the Putman takes the lead, and soon increases it to a length, seeming to run right away from the Darling; her adherents on the banks and the shipping raising loud cheers, in anticipation of victory, and the fair ones on the housetops frantically waving handkerchiefs and clapping hands.

On, on go the shells, preserving the same relative distance—on past the shipping and the point, and down the broad Ohio, followed by a gaudy train of boats on both sides of the course. As they near the buoy at Saw Mill Run, the Darling creeps slowly up to her leader, and by a quicker turn gains more than half the intervening space. Now the race is against the current, and on the home stretch. "Pull away harder, boys, we'll soon be there," cries the coxswain of the Putman, and Glave Bonnafon quickens his stroke.

"Steady! steady!" says the coxswain of the Darling. "Long strokes and strong, till we pass the point."

In consequence, the champion gains again, and a man with a spy-glass, on the bridge, shouts, "The Putman is winning the race!"

Now both boats come to the Point; the Putman still ahead; her crew full of confidence, but wishing that the starting-place was not still nearly half a mile away.

But the crew of the Darling, after their long, swinging stroke, feel stout of wind and heart, trustful in themselves and their boat, and in their coxswain, who seems to think that the crisis is at hand. Now, with a will, give way there!" he fairly shouts. "Pull, boys! pull with your eyelids!" And they bend to the tug. Every back rises and falls at the same instant; their oars fly through the water; and like a horse touched with the spur, the staunch boat fleetly answers, and cutting the waters with her bow, springs to the advance.

And now the enthusiasm knows no bounds; shouts of triumph and encouragement rise from the assembled thousands. "Hurrah for the Darling!" bursts forth. "A hundred to one on the Darling."

Then from the other party: "Give way there, Putman! lay in your backs!" And one stentorian voice above the rest: "Pull, Glave—pull for your life!"

And for his life Glave pulls, with tears in his eyes, and once more the issue seems doubtful. But no! the Darling flies through the water—her oars flashes of light—and amid deafening cheers, which that crew, at least, will never forget, passes under the bridge, the winner by half a length.

Question.—Ought the Amendment with regard to Slavery to be made a part of the Constitution?

is quite too full for fairies, so we turn to look out on our little world, seeking always the cheerful panes to tinge our view.

The Peripatetic School is in the ascendant this term, and indeed we pity any one to whom the bright days and full moon are not too tempting to let him stay indoors. Still, most lose the fairest part of the day in these luxurious times. When the sun has scarce shaken himself free of the clinging pines on the eastern ridges, and the birds are saying grace after breakfast; while the dust has not yet choked the dew on every green thing, and the air is so free and full of scents just fresh from an emerald bed and a dew-drop bath; there is twice the life in such an hour that you find in a whole lazy day. Why don't you all get up and run mornings? I don't say run because it will do you good; that is no inducement to students; but run for the pure fun of the thing. Ridiculous, is it? Now we love morning naps as well as any one, and would study till two, rather than get up at six to learn a lesson, but we know the most enjoyable part of the day is spent on the road before breakfast, and let none dispute it who has not tried it as willingly and thoroughly as we have. Run a mile or two out Prospect street, letting the boating men be the early birds to catch the first worms. It so opens the pores and spreads the chest, and sets the blood rushing so gaily through the veins; every sense is sharpened but that of pain; the perfumes come rolling up from Pleasant Valley, catching a new load at every flower on the way; the broad back of the old rock stands out so massively, and its retreating ridges seem to carry the eye almost up to green Vermont. It is good to study a scene like this every day,—it opens out so grandly. And cold water never feels so good as after such a spurt, nor breakfast ever tastes so well.

Verily, friend, it is an auspicious day for all, on which you first handle our LIT., this 10th of June. Certainly for us, since our task, well done or ill, is over; and for you, because the worms disappear to-day. In Massachusetts, I remember, they leave a week later, probably because that is the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill. They have done far less damage in the city, this year than last. The general use of the oil and straw collars, and the stripped skeletons of the trees not thus protected, seem to prove them serviceable I never pass the old button-ball tree, back of North College, without laughing at the grand joke it has played on the worms, by refusing to leave out till they are just departing. Our trees are in fair condition,—may their shadow never be less,—and the stubble will be green again for Presentation week's jollities. What a pity our grass is not kept smoothly shaven and rolled!

The long-sung, long-dreaded Biennials die away with this term. It might have been happier for the Sophs, had they done so a year ago. This seems the easiest solution to the Jubilee Committee problem. Many pleasures and displeasures die with it.

There is a sort of half morbid delight in looking forward to such tough, continuous work; rare enjoyment in the little rests caught now and then; and when it is all through, a vast satisfaction. One feels a right to the bliss of pure laziness, and anxious friends detect therein the martyr to learning, and are almost too kind and praiseful. We would not readily give up the experience of those three weeks. Opinions differ as to Annuals. Some rejoice, some believe that like the angle-worms we used to pull apart, they will make two like the old one. Well, '66 will soon find out.

We have little to say of what the country has passed through since the last term. How should we dare to touch the grandest period in history? The Lord reigneth; let all the earth keep silence before Him.

We miss the drapery that through the term has hung round the Chapel pulpit. It was solemn and beautiful. On Fast Day, June 1st, Prof. CLARKE gave an exhaustive analysis of the life and character of ABRAHAM LINCOLN. The music, also, was very fine—or should have been.

Speaking of music, we cannot forbear to mention a most charming matinée, given at the Mendelssohn Room, last Saturday. The few students who sang, all know to praise. Of the young ladies I dare not trust myself to speak; the most eloquent pen could add nothing for those of us there, and would only tantalize the less fortunate. Suffice it to say, it was the most perfect musical entertainment, in selection and execution, we have ever enjoyed in New Haven.

We have had one week filled almost solid with Prize Debates. As but three of our Editors took part, they could not conveniently take more than three prizes.

Boating is lively. Glyuna and Varuna have each a new gig, far the handsomest ever seen here, and their crews are sweating round the buoy once or twice daily. As the boats are exactly alike, with the better crew must lie success. The University crew are amusing themselves with a daily paddle. We judge from the consumption of hot cakes and pie at our table, some are hardly yet in strict training. However they have a knack of handling their oars in a winning way we love to see. Who that has trod therein can forget the mud of the old boat house? who that has waited for the tide will not remember the mud beneath the new one? They are but memories now. We have a floating dock and inclined plane, up and down which the University rattle their shell, and the gig crews tug their craft, while the barges are left to soak outside.

And about those same abused barges there really cluster the richest memories of all College boating, chiefly because they are so thoroughly social. Those unadulterated arks, the Nereid and Varuna, like the historical one of bulrushes and that other of gopher wood, are not much used after the first trip; but they have served to initiate many a green landsman into the delights of blisters and lame arms. But that light Glyuna! Did the Muse ever stoop to my lowly door, I would write epics, lyrics, sonnets, apostrophes, acrostics, anything that could worthily sing her fame. In her we first essayed our harbor's bounding billows, and got swamped landing at the Fort, Boops and all; since then we have pulled in her January and June. Couldn't she tell of the Light-house and Savin Rock, and the cone buoy, and Thimble Islands, and Guilford? She may, possibly, have heard softer voices than students wear, and seen the circular smiling moon shine on fair faces; in fact, we believe there is a full moon about now. How brilliant her sternsheets have looked on racing days, since the Club have imposed on a lighter successor to keep the champion flag she never lost. Oh, worthy boat; praise reaches not thy high desert!

We hope to get some comparison of our boating muscle with that of Harvard. We have had a Dr. here who has measured almost everything from the size of our feet to the length of our noses, and look for a full account of the result for our next number.

Ominous whispers indicate that Presentation week is coming. The Seniors are rushing their Biennial, and Frenchy has twenty-five pairs of boots to finish before Spoon Promenade.

A century of educated men must soon shake hands with sad good-bye, and on our shoulders, class-mates, will fall the Senior's mantle; our places will be filled, and so in turn the next. A new and better year opens to all.

We congratulate our readers that Mr. Brand has granted the request of many friends, in allowing us to publish the fine poem delivered at Junior Exhibition.

We are in the debt of a class-mate, for our elaborate Memorabilia, in which his own name fills a handsome place.

We are sorry for the few days delay in the appearance of our LIT., and very sorry for the three printers suddenly sick in this sweltering weather, deprived of the bountiful alleviations of ices and claret, with the admirable background of strawberries and green peas. May neither mishap occur again.

OBITUARY RECORD

OF GRADUATES OF YALE COLLEGE

Deceased during the academical year ending in July, 1865, including the record of a few who died previously, hitherto unreported.

[Presented at the Meeting of the Alumni, July 26th, 1865.]

[No. 6 of the printed Series, and No. 24 of the whole Record.]

1788.

Daniel Waldo, at the time of his death the oldest graduate of this College, died in Syracuse, N. Y., July 30, 1864, aged 101 years, 10 mos. and 20 days.

He was born in Windham, (Scotland parish,) Conn., Sept. 10, 1762, the son of Zaccheus and Talitha (Kingsbury) Waldo.

In 1778 he was drafted for a month's service at New London, and he subsequently enlisted for eight months in the service of the State.

At the age of 20 he determined to fit himself for the Christian ministry, and after studying with his cousin, Rev. Dr. C. Backus, of Somers, he entered Yale College in 1784.

After graduation he pursued a course in theology under the direction of Rev. Dr. Hart, of Preston, and was licensed to preach by the Association of Windham Co.

In May, 1792, he was settled as a pastor in West Suffield, where he remained eighteen years, and then resigned his charge. After preaching in various places, he went in 1811 to Rhode Island, under the patronage of the Evangelical Missionary Society, and there he labored continuously for nine years.

He was next settled as a pastor in Exeter, R. I., where he remained twelve years.

After this he was never settled as a pastor, but he continued to preach, chiefly in the State of New York, until almost the close of his life. His home was at Geddes from 1846 to 1856, and subsequently at Syracuse.

One of the most noteworthy events of his life was his appointment to be the Chaplain of Congress in 1855, and again in 1857, when he was 94 and 95 years old.

His faculties were unimpaired throughout his long life, and his last sermon was preached after he entered on his 102d year.

1793.

David Sherman Boardman, died at New Milford, Conn., December 2, 1864. He was born in that town, in Dec. 1768, and had consequently nearly finished his 96th year at the time of his death. He was a grandson of Daniel Boardman who graduated at this college in 1709.

After becoming twenty one years old, he undertook to fit himself for professional life, and after two years of study was admitted to the Junior class in this institution. He lived to become, after Mr. Waldo's death, the oldest living graduate of the college.

Having studied law with Judge Reeve, he was admitted to the bar in 1795, and immediately began the practice in his native place, and always maintained a high professional reputation. He was appointed Judge of the county court in 1831, but did not remain on the bench for more than two or three years.

During the latter part of his life he devoted much time to historical and literary enquiries, often writing for the press, and continuing to maintain an acquaintance with Greek and Latin writers.

Dan Huntington died at his residence in Hadley, Mass., October 31, 1864, aged 90 years.

He was the youngest child of William and Bethia (Throop) Huntington, and was born in Lebanon, Conn., Oct. 11, 1774.

He was prepared for College in the school of "Master Tisdale," in his native place.

Immediately after completing his college course, he became a tutor in Williams College. After holding that position two years, he served as a tutor in this College from 1796 to 1798. Before coming to New Haven he was licensed to preach by the Association of Berkshire County, and he subsequently continued his studies in theology under the direction of Dr. Dwight.

In October, 1798, he was ordained to the work of the ministry, and settled as pastor of the Congregational Church in Litchfield.

In 1809 he was transferred to a church in Middletown, where he remained till the death of his father-in-law, (Charles Phelps,) in 1816, when he removed to the early home of his wife in Hadley, Mass. He continued to reside in that place till his death, being for some years teacher of the Hopkins Grammar School, and in latter days preaching in various pulpits of the neighborhood.

He published in 1857 a volume of personal memoirs, partly devoted to the vindication of his theological opinions. One of his sons is Rev. F. D. Huntington, D. D.

Benjamin Silliman, son of Gen. Gold Selleck Silliman, (Y. C. 1752,) was born in the town of North Stratford, now Trumbull, Conn., August 8, 1779. He died in New Haven, Nov. 24, 1864, aged 85 years.

Mr. Silliman was a Tutor in this college from 1799 to 1804. Having pursued a course of legal studies with the intention of making the Law his profession, he was admitted to the bar in New Haven, in 1802. About that time, his attention was directed to the study of Natural Science by President Dwight, who proposed to him to accept a Professorship of Chemistry and Geology which it was intended to establish in Yale College. After attending preparatory courses of instruction in Philadelphia, Mr. Silliman delivered his first full series of lectures in Yale College in 1805, and in the following spring sailed for Europe, to prosecute his studies further, and to purchase books and apparatus for the college. He returned to this country after an absence of somewhat more than a year and resumed his duties as a teacher. From that time to his final withdrawal from the active labors of an instructor in 1855, he was constantly devoted to the work of his professorship. In addition to his college instructions, he frequently gave public courses of lectures in various parts of the country.

In 1818, he established the American Journal of Science, which he continued to publish with vigor and success until about 1850, when his son and son-in-law assumed the chief editorial labor. In addition to a large number of contributions to this journal, Prof. Silliman published several scientific works and three popular books of travel. He made a second trip to Europe in 1852.

Prof. Silliman was twice married,—in 1809 to Harriet, daughter of the second Gov. Trumbull, the mother of his nine children ; and in 1851, after her decease, to Mrs. Sarah McClellan Webb.

His health remained good and his mind clear till the close of his honored life, and his death was instantaneous and beautiful, like a translation from earth to Heaven.

The discourse delivered at his funeral by President Woolsey has been published, and a more extended memoir is preparing by Professor Geo. P. Fisher.

1860.

Samuel Jones died at the residence of his son (Ralph K. Jones, M. D.,) in Bangor, Me., Oct. 29, 1862.

He was the third son of Samuel and Lydia (Tarbox) Jones. He was born at Hebron, Dec. 22, 1778, and was fitted for college under the tuition of Rev. Dr. Amos Bassett, of his native parish.

He studied law in the office of Hon. Sylvester Gilbert, of Hebron, with whom for a short time he practiced his profession, after having been admitted, in Sept., 1803, to the bar of Tolland Co. In 1804 he removed to Glastenbury, and in 1808 to Stockbridge, Mass., where he practiced his profession till the spring of 1845. He represented Stockbridge, on several occasions, in the Massachusetts Legislature, was at one time a member of the electoral college, and in 1843 he was appointed one of the Commissioners of the State of Massachusetts to assist in setting off land to the settlers on the N. E. boundary of Maine, in accordance with the Ashburton treaty. From 1845 to 1849, he was an Inspector of the Port of Boston, and from then till 1851 he continued to reside in that city. He subsequently returned to Stockbridge, and in 1853 retired from active business, passing the remainder of his life with his children in different places.

His remains were interred in Stockbridge.

About 1840 he published a "Treatise on the Right of Suffrage." Boston, 12mo.

1802.

John Alfred Davenport died in New Haven, October 14, 1864, aged 81 years.

He was the son of Hon. John Davenport, (Y. C. 1770,) and a lineal descendant of Rev. John Davenport, the first minister of New Haven.

Immediately after leaving college, he entered upon mercantile pursuits in New York City, where he remained for about fifty years, residing during a part of the time in the neighboring city of Brooklyn. In 1853 he removed to New Haven, where his home continued during the remainder of his life. His career as a business man was successful, and his interest in the progress of religious and benevolent societies was a life-long characteristic.

His two sons graduated at Yale College in 1830 and 1833. The funeral discourse by Rev. Dr. Cleaveland has been printed.

Mark Mead was born in Greenwich, Nov. 6, 1782, and died in the same town, August 8, 1864, aged 81 years.

He prepared for college under Rev. Dr. Lewis of his native place. Having studied theology with Rev. Dr. C. Backus and Rev. Dr. J. Smalley, he was licensed to preach in the summer of 1804, and was ordained pastor of the church in Middlebury, Ct., in Nov. 1809. He was dismissed from this charge in 1830, and after acting successively as the stated supply of the churches in Grassy Hill and in Northfield, he returned in 1839 to Greenwich where he afterwards resided.

He was married in 1804. One of his two sons graduated in medicine at this college in 1829.

Nathan Shelton died in Jamaica, L. I., July 25, 1864, aged 80 years. He was born in Huntington, Ct., June 6, 1784, the son of Andrew and Sarah (Booth) Shelton.

After a preliminary course of medical studies in his native State and in the city of New York, he entered upon a course of professional life in Jamaica, L. I., and there he continued to reside until his death.

He was licensed to practice medicine by the Medical Society of Connecticut soon after he left college. He received the degree of M. D. from this College in 1835.

Joseph Wright died at his residence in Glastenbury, Nov. 24, 1864, aged 79 years.

For two or three years after leaving College, he taught successfully the academy in his native place, and he then engaged in agricultural pursuits on his paternal estate, where he continued to reside the rest of his life.

In 1827 he was chosen Deacon of the First Church in Glastenbury, and he continued to perform the duties of this office till the time of his death.

He married a daughter of Rev. William Lockwood, (Y. C. 1774,) pastor of the church in Glastenbury, and had six children, four of whom survive him. One of his sons graduated at Yale College in 1832, and another in 1839.

1806.

Nathaniel Chauncey died in Philadelphia, February 9, 1865, aged 76 years, nearly.

He was the third son of Hon. Charles and Abigail (Darling) Chauncey, of New Haven, and was born Feb. 27, 1789.

He was a highly respected lawyer in the city of Philadelphia.

In 1836 he married Elizabeth Sewall, (eldest daughter of Samuel and Nancy Salisbury, of Boston,) who died May 22, 1850. Two of their three sons are still living.

Joseph Edwards was born in Meriden, Conn., August 27, 1783, and died at his residence in Ripley, Ohio, April 30, 1863, aged 79 years.

He studied theology with Rev. Mr. Hooker, was engaged for a time in teaching, and was settled several times as a pastor over different congregations.

The latter part of his life he spent upon a farm which he had purchased in Ripley, Ohio, preaching occasionally.

He was twice married, and had seven children, one of whom is Rev. Mr. Edwards, of East Cleveland.

James Lockwood died in Lewisboro', Westchester Co., N. Y., Sept. 30, 1864, aged 81. He was son of James Lockwood, and was born in New Canaan, Fairfield Co., Conn., in 1783.

He studied medicine with Dr. Richmond of Westport, and commenced the practice of his profession in his adopted town, where he resided for more than a half century, engaged in the faithful discharge of his professional duties.

Although in extended practice, he found time for varied reading, and especially to keep up his studies of the Greek and Latin Classics. He would often sit up to a late hour poring over his favorite authors, Homer, Plato, Livy, Horace, etc.

One only of his three children, Dr. Jas. D. Lockwood of Cross River, Westchester Co. N. Y., is surviving.

William Fowler Vaill, died in Wethersfield, Illinois, February 24, 1865, aged 81 years 9 months. He was a son of Rev. Joseph Vaill, Pastor for more than fifty years of the Congregational Church in Hadlyme, Conn., where the subject of this sketch was born.

His theological studies were pursued under the direction of the Rev. Asahel Hooker of Goshen. He was licensed to preach, Sept. 15, 1807, by the Middlesex Association, and in December, 1808, he was settled as Pastor of the Congregational Church in North Guilford, Conn, where he remained till April 1820. He was afterwards employed as a Missionary to the Osage Indians, by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and was subsequently stationed by the Am. Home Missionary Society in Wethersfield, Ill.

Jonathan Knight, died in New Haven, August 25, 1864, aged 75 years, nearly.

He was a son of Dr. Jonathan Knight, a Surgeon's mate in the Revolutionary army, and was born in Norwalk, Conn., Sept. 4, 1789. His mother was a daughter of Dr. Asahel Fitch, of Reading.

For two years after graduation he taught school in Norwich and New London, and was next a Tutor in Yale College for one year. He then attended two annual courses of medical lectures in the University of Pennsylvania, having already been licensed to practice, by the Connecticut Medical Society, in August, 1811. He received the honorary degree of M. D. from Yale College in 1818.

The Medical Institution of Yale College was organized in 1813, and he was appointed the Professor of Anatomy and Physiology. He continued in this post for twenty-five years, when he was transferred to the Chair of Surgery. After having lectured for more than fifty years to successive classes of students, he resigned all connection with the college, in May, 1864. For many years, in addition to his duties in the medical school, he lectured on Anatomy and Physiology to the Senior class in the Academical Department. During all his residence in New Haven, he was engaged in extensive practice.

He was President in 1846 and 1847, of the Convention which formed the American Medical Association, and was also President of the Association itself in 1853. At the time of his death he was President of the American Mutual Life Insurance Co. The Knight Hospital of the U. S. Government, in New Haven, was named in his honor.

A funeral discourse by Rev. Dr. Bacon, and a commemorative sketch by Prof. F. Bacon, M. D., were printed.

Hezekiah Bradley Chaffee died at Windsor, Conn., Dec. 13, 1864.

Howland Fish died at Fultonville, N. Y., June 21, 1862, aged 75. He was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., Dec. 1786.

He studied law with the late Philip Parker of Hudson, and pursued the profession with success in Johnstown, Glen and Fultonville.

He represented Montgomery Co., three times in the State Legislature, was an active member of the Constitutional Convention of 1820, and in later years held the office of District Attorney.

1810.

Samuel Griswold Chaffee died at Hartford, Conn., July 10, 1864. He was born May 15, 1791.

He resided during his life at Hartford, engaged in mercantile pursuits.

Alpheus Dimmick was born March 22, 1787, and died in Bloomingburgh, Jan. 17, 1865, aged 77 years.

He commenced the practice of law in Bloomingburgh, Sullivan Co., N. Y., where he continued to reside through life.

In 1828 he was a member of the Legislature, and was subsequently for a number of years, County Judge and Surrogate. In all the relations of life he was respected for his uprightness and integrity.

1811.

William Deming was born in Litchfield, Conn., March 1, 1792, the son of Julius Deming, and died in that place, May 2, 1865, aged 73 years.

He was engaged in mercantile pursuits during his early life, in New York city, but he retired to his home in Litchfield, many years ago, and has since resided there.

1812.

Charles Nichols died in Brooklyn, N. Y., June 2, 1865, aged 75 years. He was a descendant of Sir Richard Nichols, the early colonial governor in New York.

He was long established in mercantile pursuits in the city of New York, as a member of the firm of Palmer & Nichols.

He was American Consul at Amsterdam, under President Tyler, and also under President Polk.

He married a daughter of Maj. Benj. Romaine.

1813.

Thomas Frederick Davies was born at Reading, Conn., August 24, 1793. He was a son of Dr. Thomas Davies, and was of the same family with Rev. Thomas Davies who graduated at this college in 1758. He was fitted for college by Rev. Dr. Ely, of Huntington.

After his graduation he was engaged for a year or two in teaching at New Haven, at the same time pursuing his theological studies under the direction of Dr. Dwight. He was licensed to preach in May 1816, and in March 1817 was ordained and installed as pastor of the Congregational Church of Huntington, succeeding his former teacher, Dr. Ely. Compelled by ill-health to resign this pastoral office, Mr. Davies removed to New Haven in 1819, and became the editor of the Christian Spectator. After having been thus engaged for several years, and subsequently connected with the Religious Intellegencer, he accepted a call from the church in Green Farms, (now Westport,) where he remained from 1829 to 1839. During the next ten years he resided in New Haven, and the residue of his life he divided between his native place, New Haven and Westport, Conn.

He was twice married, and his second wife survives him. One of his sons graduated here in 1843, and another in 1853.

His death occurred at the house of his daughter, in Westport, on the 16th of February, 1865, after an illness of about ten days. A sketch of his life and character, by Rev. Dr. Sprague, appeared in the New York Observer of April 6, 1865.

Ambrose Eggleston died at Coldwater, Mich., Jan. 22, 1865.

1815.

Horatio Gridley died in Hartford, November 9, 1864, aged 72 years.

He was native of Berlin, Kensington Society, Conn.

He graduated at the Theological Seminary in Andover in 1818, and also pursued a course of studies in medicine. His life was devoted to the latter profession.

He was at one time a member of the Connecticut Senate, and as such he became one of the Corporation of Yale College. About 13 years ago, he removed to Hartford, soon after the death of his son Dr. H. W. Gridley, (Y. C. 1847,) but he did not resume the practice of his profession.

Horace Hooker son of Elijah and Susanna (Seymour) Hooker, was born in Kensington Society, Berlin, Conn., March 1793, and died in Hartford, December 17, 1864, aged 71 years.

He was a descendant of Rev. Thomas Hooker, first minister of Hartford. He fitted for college under the direction of Rev. Joab Brace, D. D., (Y. C. 1804,) at Newington. After graduating, he was for about two years Principal of the Hartford Grammar School, from which he was called to be Tutor in Yale College, which office he held from 1817 to 1822. During this time he studied theology and was licensed to preach the gospel. In the year 1822, he was ordained as pastor of the Congregational Church in Watertown, Conn., where he remained about two years, being then compelled to resign his pastorate on account of ill-health. In 1824 he returned to Hartford and became editor of the Connecticut Observer, a religious newspaper, which he conducted with ability for many years. He also held the office of Secretary of the Missionary Society of Connecticut, from 1826, and of the Connecticut Home Missionary Society, from 1831 till his death.

In 1852, he was appointed Chaplain of the Retreat for the Insane, performing the duties of that office until incapacitated by an attack of paralysis in August, 1862. For several years previous to 1856, he spent his leisure time in the preparation of books for children. Among these were "Child's Book on the Sabbath;" "The Farmer;" "Prophets and Prophecy;" and four volumes of "Scripture Biography." In connection with Rev. Dr. Gallaudet, he prepared "The Practical Spelling Book," and "The School and Family Dictionary." With the assistance of Rev. Dr. Daggett, he selected and arranged the "Hymns and Psalms," as set forth by the General Association of Connecticut, in use for twenty years past in most of the Congregational Churches in this State.

Mr. Hooker was a clear thinker, and expressed his thoughts in a style remarkable for its neatness and perspicuity.

He married, July 17, 1822, Mary Ann Brown, who died May 3, 1838, without children. He married Harriet Watkinson, Nov. 22, 1843, who survives him. He left a son, Thomas, (Y. C. 1864,) and a daughter.

1816.

Thomas Mather Smith died while on a visit to his friends at Portland, Me., Sept. 6, 1864, aged 67 years.

He was born in 1797 in Stamford, Conn., the son of Rev. Daniel Smith, (Y. C. 1791,) for fifty years Pastor of the Congregational Church in that place.

When his college course was concluded, he spent a year in study with his uncle, Hon. John Cotton Smith, and in 1820 he graduated at the Theological Seminary in Andover. In 1822 he was ordained as a minister, and settled over the Third Congregational Church in Portland. He was subsequently a Pastor in Fall River, Mass., Catskill, N. Y., and New Bedford, Mass.

His views respecting the ministry having changed, he desired to be admitted to orders in the Episcopal Church, and was ordained Deacon, at New Bedford, by Bishop Smith, of Kentucky, and a year later, Priest by Bishop Eastburn, of Massachusetts. He was soon after appointed Milnor Professor of Systematic Divinity in the Theological Seminary at Gambier, Ohio, and subsequently, for four years, in addition to holding this Professorship, he was President of Kenyon College.

After eighteen years of unremitting toil at Gambier, he resigned his professorship and was named an Emeritus Professor. He received the degree of D. D. from Bowdoin College in 1850. His wife was the daughter of Rev. Dr. L. Woods, of Andover.

William Heathcote DeLancey, was born at Mamaroneck, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1797, a decendant of Huguenot ancestors. He died at Geneva, N. Y., April 5, 1865, aged 67 years.

Having studied theology under Bishop Hobart, he was admitted in 1822, to the order of priests, and soon became an assistant minister in the associated parishes of Christ Church, St. Peter's and St. James's in Philadelphia. From 1823 to 1830, he was annually chosen Secretary of the Diocesan Convention, and from 1823 to 1829, was also Secretary of the House of Bishops. In 1828, he became Provost of the University of Pennsylvania. After remaining in that office for five years, he became again an assistant minister of St. Peter's church, and on the death of Bishop White, the Rector of that parish.

In 1838, he was chosen Bishop of the newly constituted Diocese of Western New York, and accordingly removed his residence to Geneva. His consecration to the Episcopal office took place May 9, 1839.

In 1852, Bishop DeLancey was appointed a delegate to attend the Jubilee commemoration of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, and in this capacity made a visit to Europe. He then received the degree of J. C. D. from the University of Oxford. He had in 1828 received the degree of S. T. D. from his Alma Mater, and in 1847, the degree of LL. D. from Union College.

The body of Bishop DeLancey was interred in the family burial-ground at Mamaroneck.

Noyes Billings, second son of Coddington and Eunice (Williams) Billings, was born March 31, 1800, at Stonington, Conn. He was fitted for College at New London, by the late Prof. Olmsted.

After his graduation he commenced the study of law with Judge Swift of Windham, which he continued with Judges Reeve and Gould in Litchfield. In 1821 he went to New Orleans with the expectation of practicing his profession in that city, but ill-health compelled his return to the north. For the same cause he was persuaded to give up a professional life, and after a visit to Europe in 1823, he established himself in the whaling business at New London, in company with his brother. He was at different times Mayor of New London, Representative in the General Assembly, State Senator and Lieut. Governor. He repeatedly declined invitations to office under the Democratic administrations of the United States.

In 1838 he made a second visit to Europe. In 1844 he retired from business, and in 1846 he again went abroad, residing in Europe during the greater part of the next six years. After a short residence in New York City, he returned to New London, which continued to be his home. He died April 24, 1865, at the age of 65 years, leaving a widow but no children.

He was married in October, 1825, to Isabella L., daughter of James Stewart, then British Consul at New London.

1820.

Stephen William Starkey was the son of Stephen and Phebe Starkey, of part of the town of Saybrook, comprising the present town of Essex, Conn., where he was born September 7, 1797.

For some time after taking his first degree in college, he was engaged in teaching, pursuing at the same time the study of law. He was admitted to the bar at Haddam, in Middlesex County, Conn., April 8, 1823; after having completed his studies in the office of Joseph Platts, Esq., in his native town. Here he followed his profession, managing at the same time a considerable farm, all his life.

He married first Miss Emily Hayden, and after her decease, Miss Mary Hayden, both of Saybrook. The latter still survives him. He died at Essex, March 14, 1863, aged 66 years.

William Joseph Hubbard died in Boston, Nov. 14, 1864, aged 62 years. He was son of David Greene Hubbard, and was born in New York City, July 3, 1802.

Immediately after leaving college, he went to Boston and began the study of law in the office of his uncle, Hon. Samuel Hubbard (Y. C. 1802,) residing in his family. Boston continued to be his home through life, and the law his chosen profession.

He was occasionally called into public life, having been in 1834, and subsequently, a member of the State Legislature, and in 1853, a member of the Convention for revising the Constitution of the State. He was a Master in Chancery, and was often appointed a referee in legal business. For nearly twenty years he was a leading member and chairman of the Prudential Committee of the A. B. C. F. M. To the close of his life he presided over the corporation which has the care of the Academy and the Theological Seminary at Andover.

His death was occasioned by an accident which befell him about four weeks previous, in the city of New York. He left a widow and several children. His son, David G., graduated at this college in 1852. A discourse commemorative of his life and character was delivered by Rev. J. E. Todd, and printed, Boston 1864, 8vo. 17pp.

1821.

Charles Richard Alsop was born in Middletown, Dec. 25, 1802, and died in that city March 5, 1865, aged 62 years.

After studying law with Chancellor Kent, and Daniel Lord, Esq. of New York, he was admitted to the bar in his native state, and commenced the practice of his profession, residing in Middletown.

From 1843 to 1846 he was Mayor of Middletown, and in 1855 he represented the 18th Senatorial District in the Connecticut Legislature.

He was a member of the Corporation of Yale College in 1855–6.

David Walker [Benjamin] Barton died in Winchester, Va., July, 1863, aged about 61 years.

He was a lawyer by profession, and had been a member of the Virginia Legislature. He was an earnest opponent of the southern secession, and his death is said to have been occasioned by the domestic distress which the war produced.

1825.

Hubbard Winslow died at Williston, Vermont, his native place, Aug. 13, 1864.

He was born Oct. 30, 1799, son of Nathaniel and Anna (Kellogg) Winslow, and brother of Rev. Miron and Rev. Gordon Winslow.

He began his theological studies in Andover, and completed them in New Haven. In December 1828, he was ordained Pastor of the First Congregational Church in Dover, N. H., from which place he retired three years afterward.

In Sept. 1832, he was installed Pastor of the Bowdoin St. Church, Boston, succeeding there Rev. Lyman Beecher. In 1844 he became principal of the Mount Vernon School for Young Ladies, which position he held nine years, often preaching on the Sabbath in Boston and its vicinity.

He afterward made a visit to Europe, and then devoted himself to the preparation of several books. In June 1857, he was installed as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Geneva, N. Y. He remained there two years and then went to New York, where he opened a boarding-school for young ladies. In 1861 he was installed pastor of the 50th St. Presbyterian Church in New York, but he did not continue there many months. He devoted the closing part of his life to teaching and writing for the press.

Among the most important of his numerous publications are the following :—" Discourses on the Trinity," " The Young Man's Aid," " Self Examination," " Intellectual Philosophy," and " Moral Philosophy."

He is also the author of various printed discourses, including a history of the Presbyterian Church in Geneva.

He received the degree of D. D. from Hamilton College in 1858.

1826.

Mason Fitch Cogswell died in Albany, Jan. 21, 1865. He was son of M. F. Cogswell, M. D., and Mary (Ledyard) Cogswell, and born at Hartford, Nov. 10, 1809.

After a course of medical studies in New York, he received the degree of M. D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in 1832. He then established himself at Albany, and devoted his life to his chosen profession. Among other local trusts which he held, he was for a long time one of the physicians of the City Hospital. He married, in 1847, Lydia Bradford, and his widow and two sons survive him.

On the breaking out of the rebellion he was appointed examining surgeon of the military post at Albany, and many thousand volunteers passed under his inspection. In 1862, during the Peninsular Campaign, he was active in organizing a Field Hospital at the White House in Virginia, and the exposure and arduous labors incident to that work led to serious inroads on his health. He was subsequently surgeon of the Post Hospital, Assistant Surgeon of the U. S. Hospital, and later, full Surgeon.

In February, 1863, with Dr. Thomas Hun, he was appointed under the direction of the Sanitary Commission, to inspect the Western Hospitals, and the duty was performed with efficiency and thoroughness.

David Francis Bacon died in the city of New York, Jan. 23, 1865, aged 51 years.

He was a son of Rev. David Bacon, (well known as one of the missionary pioneers in Ohio and Michigan,) and was born Nov. 30, 1813, in Prospect, Ct.

He graduated in medicine at this college in 1836, and a short time afterwards was sent out by the American Colonization Society, as principal colonial Physician in Liberia.

After his return from Africa, he published three parts of a work entitled "Wanderings on the Seas and Shores of Africa," in which his observations on the west coast of that country are very minutely recorded. (N. Y. 1843. 8vo.)

During most of his life he resided in New York, and at one time he was actively engaged in political affairs, as an earnest advocate of the election of Henry Clay to the Presidency. He was a frequent contributor to the periodicals of the day.

In 1835 he published a work, evincing much research, entitled "Lives of the Apostles."

1833.

Hiram Doane died at Vicksburg, July 22, 1863.

He was born in the town of Loraine, N. Y., March 17, 1806.

After studying theology in this college, he engaged in the work of a minister in different parts of New York State. He was settled at Smithville in 1838, and in 1841 became pastor of a church in Rutland, N. Y. In 1850 he was settled in Carthage, laboring also in Deep River. In 1856 he removed to Norwich, then to Wabashaw, and afterwards to Peoria, Ill.

In 1862 he became chaplain in the 47th Ill. Inf. serving with fidelity and bravery in the campaign before Vicksburg, till his life gave way under the malarial influences to which he was exposed.

A commemorative sermon preached at Rutland, N. Y., Oct. 4, 1863, by Rev. J. Douglas, has been printed.

1834.

Henry William Ellsworth, son of Hon. Henry L., (Y. C. 1810) and Nancy (Goodrich) Ellsworth, was born at Windsor, Conn., in 1814.

His legal studies were pursued at the Law School in New Haven.

In 1844, he was one of the Presidential electors in Indiana, voting for President Polk, by whom he was appointed in the following year, Chargé des Affaires in Sweden.

His death occurred in New Haven, August, 1864, at the age of 50 years.

1835.

JOSHUA HILL was born in 1813, at Limerick, Maine.

After a course of legal studies he was admitted to the bar in his native state in Nov. 1838, and commenced the practice of his profession first with Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, and was afterwards in business by himself in the town of Hampden, Me. At one time he was Inspector of Customs at that place.

His death occurred Oct. 12, 1860, at the age of 47 years.

He married in 1840 a daughter of Hon. J. Herrick, of Hampden, and his widow with two children survives him.

1843.

JOHN MYERS HUNTINGTON, son of Thomas M. and Mary (Campbell) Huntington of Norwich, was born in New York, April 3, 1821, and died at Marietta, Ohio, October 10, 1864, aged 43 years.

After a course of legal study at Cambridge, Mass, he established himself in Cleveland, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar. In 1846, he removed to Cincinnati, and was for a time engaged in editorial labors. Two years later he went to California and resumed the practice of his profession at Sonora. He subsequently came to Chicago, where he resided till the time when the rebellion began.

He entered the Union army as a volunteer, and held the rank of Captain in the Quartermaster's Department.

TIMOTHY LINSLEY, son of the Rev. Ammi Linsley, was born in Hartland, Conn., May 3, 1822, and died in North Haven, Nov. 4, 1864, aged 42 years.

After graduating, he taught school for nearly two years in Trumbull and Washington, Conn.

During the greater part of his life since leaving college, he has been an inmate of the Retreats in Brattleboro and Hartford.

1845.

WILLIAM GUSTINE CONNER died at Gettysburg, July 3, 1863.

He held the position of Brigadier General in the rebel army, and as such was killed in action.

James Redfield fell mortally wounded in the battle of Allatoona Pass, October 6, 1864, at the age of 40 years.

He was son of Luther Redfield and was born in Clyde, Wayne Co., N. Y., March 27, 1824.

After leaving college he studied law in his native place, was elected County School Commissioner, and finally accepted a position at Albany, in the office of Hon. Christopher Morgan, Secretary of State.

In 1855, he removed to Iowa, and established himself near the geographical centre of the State. The town of Redfield, Dallas Co., received its name from him. He held several offices of trust in the county, and in 1860 was elected State Senator.

On the outbreak of the war he raised a company of which he was elected Captain, and on the organization of a regiment, the 39th Iowa Infantry, he was elected its Lieutenant Colonel. He continued in that post until his death. His regiment was in active service at the West, under Buel, Grant and Sherman.

When Allatoona Pass was attacked by French's Division of Hood's army, Col. Redfield, then garrisoning the town of Rome, went forward with his command to defend the pass. While cheering on his men to resist the rebel attack, a ball pierced his heart and he fell dead.

His remains were buried in a village near the battle-field.

He left a widow and three children.

Othniel De Forest died at his residence in New York City, December 16, 1864, aged 37 years. He was son of Charles De Forest, and was born in New York, Aug. 13, 1826.

In July 1861 he received authority from the Secretary of War to raise a regiment of Cavalry, and subsequently to raise a Brigade. He succeeded in organizing two regiments and a part of a third, when the Government determined to raise no more Cavalry. These two regiments were the 5th and 6th N. Y. Cavalry, and were called the 1st and 2nd "Ira Harris Guards." In 1862 he raised another regiment which became the 12th New York.

He married in 1851, Miss Frances R. Nevins, who with four children survives him.

Henry Hamilton Hadley, youngest son of Prof. James Hadley, of Buffalo, N. Y., died at Washington, D. C., Aug. 1, 1864.

After graduation, he pursued for one year a general course of study in New Haven, and then entered the Theological Department of the College. In Sept. 1850 he went to Andover, Mass., where he completed his studies in preparation for the ministry in 1851. In May of that year, he became Tutor in Yale College, and continued in this office until Dec. 1852. At the beginning of the year 1853, owing to doubts in regard to his fitness for the pastoral work, he turned his attention to the study of law, and removed to the city of New York. His scholastic tendencies, however, were too strong to be resisted, and in 1854 he returned to New Haven, where he devoted himself for four years to the careful study of the Hebrew language and the Old Testament Scriptures. In 1858 he was appointed instructor in Hebrew, in Union Theological Seminary in New York, and in 1862 he became Assistant Professor of Hebrew in that institution. He continued in that position till the time of his death. In 1861, after the death of Prof. Gibbs, he was elected to the Professorship of the Hebrew language and literature in this college, but he held this office only for a single year, and during that time discharged its duties in connection with the duties of his place in New York. He had already become one of the most successful and promising scholars in the country in his department, and in his death the cause of theological learning sustained a loss which is not easily measured.

His devotion to the cause of the country in the late struggle, was manifested from the very outset. He was with great difficulty, and only by the urgent advice of his friends, prevented from enlisting as a soldier in the army; and, when at length he gave up going himself, he provided successively two substitutes to serve in his place. Not content with this, after the close of the Seminary year in June 1865, he engaged in the work of the Sanitary Commission, and served in one of the Hospitals at City Point, Va. Here he was prostrated by sickness, and, after lingering for a while, was compelled to return homeward. He had pursued his journey only as far as Washington, when his death occurred.

Shelden Clark Beecher was born at Oxford, Conn., April 7, 1826.

After leaving college he was occupied nearly all his time in teaching, at various towns in the state of New York, until 1858, when he established himself in Brooklyn, as a teacher in a private school.

In Sept. 1862, he received a commission as 1st Lieut. Co. C, 139th N. Y. Infantry, and was promoted to be Captain of the same company Dec. 16, 1863.

On the 2nd of June 1864, his regiment was engaged in an action at Cold Harbor, Va., in which he was struck by a ball and died soon after.

He left a widow, now residing in Bristol, Conn., and four children.

1851.

James Budlong died in Richmond, Va., Jan. 29, 1860, in the 33d year of his age, He was born in Nashua, N. H., April 12, 1827, the only son of James and Julia Budlong of Pawtucket, R. I.

He pursued a course of medical studies in Providence, R. I. and in Philadelphia, receiving the degree of M. D. from the University of Pennsylvania, in 1854. For the sake of further improvement in his profession, he went abroad, and spent a year in studies at Paris.

He finally established himself in practice at Pawtucket, and acquired a good reputation as a Physician and Surgeon.

His death was occasioned by consumption on his return from a tour to the south in search of health.

Byron Hart died in N. Y., October 7, 1864, aged 36 years. He was born in Hartsville, Buck Co., Penn., October 15, 1827.

He studied medicine in Philadelphia, received his degree at the Jefferson Medical College in March, 1854, and continued to practice in the same city.

1852.

William Flintoff Humphrey, was born at Maccan, Cumberland Co. Nova Scotia, Oct. 24, 1826.

After leaving college, he pursued a course of studies in medicine, at the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, receiving the degree of M. D. at that institution in April, 1854. He continued his professional studies in Edinburgh and Paris, and was occupied for a year as House Physician in the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh.

He subsequently established himself at St. John, New Brunswick, and engaged successfully in the practice of his profession.

Last November he left his home for the Mediterranean, hoping that a milder climate might restore his failing health, but his pulmonary complaint was incurable, and he died at Valetta in the island of Malta, Feb. 7, 1865, aged 38 years.

His widow survives him.

Samuel Curtis Blackman, son of Hon. Alfred Blackman, (Y. C. 1828,) died in New Haven, Aug. 20, 1864, aged 31.

He was born in Humphreysville, (now Seymour,) Conn., April 7, 1833.

He studied law in New Haven, and was admitted to the bar in this place, Sept. 2, 1856. He was for a time clerk in the U. S. District and Circuit Courts, and was also clerk of the city of New Haven.

John Samuel Donelson, son of Andrew J. Donelson, died Sept. 9, 1863.

After graduation he studied law and began the practice of his profession in Memphis.

In 1862, he entered the Confederate service as Lieutenant, and was subsequently promoted to be Captain. He was killed in the battle of Chickamauga.

Lewis Ledyard Weld, the third son of Lewis Weld, (Y. C. 1818,) was born at Hartford, May 13, 1833.

After two years spent in teaching, he pursued the study of law in Cleveland, Ohio, and in New York City, and was admitted to the bar in 1857.

In 1858 and 1859, he was settled as an Attorney at Leavenworth, Kansas, and took strong ground in opposition to the Lecompton Constitution. He afterwards removed to the neighborhood of Pike's Peak, settled at Denver and continued the practice of his profession.

When the territory of Colorado in 1861 was organized, he was made the Secretary, and was for some time the Acting Governor, exerting powerful influence for the maintenance of the national authority.

In 1862, he resigned his office, with a view to engage in the military service. While awaiting a suitable opportunity he edited the Denver Commonwealth newspaper. In Oct. 1863, he passed the examining board as Major, and subsequently became Lieutenant Colonel of the 41st U. S. Colored Troops. He served in Maryland, South Carolina, Florida, and in the Army of the James before Richmond, where he died Jan. 10, 1865, from an acute disease brought on by exposure.

1856.

Frank Henry Peck, the son of Chauncey B. Peck, was born in New Haven, Sept. 20, 1836. He died in 1864, on the anniversary of his birth, aged 28 years.

After leaving college he was engaged for a short time in teaching at West Killingly, Conn., and in 1857 he began the study of law in the Law School at New Haven. He was admitted to the bar in 1859, and began his professional career in his native place, holding at one time the office of clerk of the Probate Court, and subsequently that of Grand Juror.

Upon the organization of the 12th Reg. Conn. Vols., (Col. Deming,) he went with it, as Major, to New Orleans. During much of the time he was in command of the regiment and at length he was commissioned as its Colonel.

He fell in the battle of Opequan Creek, near Winchester, Va., Sept. 19, 1864, and died in hospital next day.

Theodore Woolsey Twining was the eldest of twin brothers, born Sept. 4, 1835, at West Point, N. Y., sons of Alex. C. Twining (Y. C. 1820,) and Harriet A. (Kinsley) Twining.

For two years after graduation, he was occupied partly in teaching and partly as an assistant in the field operations of a civil engineer. He subsequently entered the Law Department of Yale College, received the degree of LL. B. in 1862, and was admitted to the bar in New Haven, May 15, 1863. He deferred entering upon the practice of his profession for the sake of serving the country in the war. He first enlisted as a private in the 37th N. Y. Regiment, and was mustered out with the regiment when its term of service expired. In July, 1863, he received an appointment as Acting Assistant Paymaster in the U. S. Navy, and served in that capacity on the U. S. Steamer Kensington till May 1864. He was then ordered to the U. S. Bark Roebuck, serving as a blockader on the east coast of Florida. The vessel was afterwards ordered to the west coast, and in lying off Key West for three days, became infected with yellow fever. Paymaster Twining was attacked by this disease, and after an illness of little more than three days, died on Sunday, August 14th, 1864, in Tampa Bay. His remains are buried at Egmont Key.

Edward Carrington, the son of Edward Carrington, was born in Hartford, in 1838. His parents soon removed to Colebrook, from which place he came to college in 1855.

After a year passed in teaching, he entered the Law School of Columbia College, where he was graduated LL. B, in 1862. He immediately commenced practice in the office of Bowdoin, Larocques & Barlow, of New York.

Upon learning of the death of his classmate, Capt. Hannahs, who fell in the service of the nation, in the autumn of 1862, he determined to enter the volunteer army, and received a commission as 2nd Lieutenant in the 143d Regiment of N. Y. volunteers. He was soon promoted to be 1st Lieutenant, and assigned to Gen. Wadsworth's staff, in which capacity he acted in the battles of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. He was afterwards transferred to Gen. Newton's staff, and accompanied that officer in Sherman's campaign against Atlanta. Gen. Newton being assigned to duty at Key West, he accompanied him to that place, and acted as Associate Judge in the Provost Court. He participated in many battles but was always unhurt, till he fell mortally wounded on the 6th of March, 1865, in the advance against St. Marks, while leading one of the columns to a charge in the battle of Natural Bridge.

Henry Ward Camp was born in Hartford, February 4, 1839, the son of Rev. Henry B. (Y. C. 1833,) and Cornelia (Baldwin) Camp. The father was one of the instructors in the American Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb.

After a few months spent in teaching, Henry W. Camp commenced the study of law in the office of John Hooker, Esq., in Hartford. In December 1861, he was commissioned as 2nd Lieut. in the 10th Connecticut Infantry. He was afterwards appointed Adjutant, and on one occasion was detailed as Judge Advocate of a General Court Martial on Seabrook Island.

In July 1863, he took part in the heavy fight on James Island, and also in the assault on Fort Wagner on the 19th of that month. In a cessation of hostilities for the burial of the dead and the removal of the wounded, he was seized with Chaplain H. C. Trumbull, and carried as a prisoner to Charleston, and thence to Columbia, S. C. He escaped at length from confinement, but after a tramp of nearly a hundred miles, was recaptured and held a prisoner till April 1864. He made a short visit at home, but as soon as his exchange was effected, he hurried back to his regiment, and shared with it in the Army of the James, five months of the most arduous and dangerous service. In Sept. 1864, while before Petersburg, he was commissioned as Major.

On the 13th of October he fought his last fight. After skirmishing all day between the Darbytown and Charles City roads, about four miles from Richmond, his regiment was ordered to lead an assault on the enemy's works. "Come on, boys, Come on," he shouted to this men, and the words were hardly uttered before he fell shot through and through. His body was recovered next day and taken to Hartford for interment. The record of his beautiful and heroic life has been written by the Chaplain of the regiment, Rev. H. C. Trumbull, under the title of "The Knightly Soldier; a record of College, Field and Prison."

William Bardwell Clark, son of Erastus Clark, of Granby, Mass., was born in that place Jan. 20, 1838.

In July 1862, he enlisted as a private in the 34th Mass. Inf. and served as a private and non-commissioned officer until Jan. 20, 1864. He was then appointed, after an examination by Gen. Casey's Board, a Captain in the 22nd Regt. U. S. Colored Troops. He was wounded at Petersburg, Va., June 15, when his regiment was the first to plant the national colors on the rebel works. In a reconnoissance in force beyond the Fair Oaks battle field, Oct. 27, 1864, our troops were repulsed, and Capt. Clark was left on the field mortally wounded.

Gilbert Miles Stocking died at Jefferson Barracks Hospital, Jan. 24, 1865, aged 26 years.

He was a native of Waterbury, Conn., where he was born Dec. 22, 1838.

Having spent two years in teaching at Lyme and Greenwich, Conn., and in the Hopkins Grammar School, New Haven, he determined to give himself to the cause of the country. At the close of the year 1863, he enlisted and soon afterwards joined Co. B, of the 20th Connecticut Infantry, then in the Department of the Cumberland, guarding the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad. During the rest of the winter he acted as clerk in the Quartermaster's Department, and in the following spring took the field and participated in the operations which resulted in the capture of Atlanta. Though detailed as a clerk at Brigade Headquarters, he claimed no exemption from the work of a private soldier, but took his turn in the trenches and on the picket line, till his strength was exhausted, and he was compelled to go into hospital. He was sent northward when Atlanta was evacuated, and after a wearisome journey was placed in the Hospital of Jefferson Barracks near St. Louis.

It was thought he would recover his health if quiet and care could be secured for him, and his discharge papers were accordingly made out. He was expecting to set out for home in a day or two, when alone at night he quietly passed away from earth to Heaven.

His remains were brought home to Waterbury. A sketch of his career, from the pen of one of his classmates, appears in the Connecticut War Record for May 1865.

George Worman was born in Mt. Pleasant, Westmoreland Co., Penn., Nov 24, 1832. His widowed mother had in 1850 removed her home to Mendon, Ill., from which place he came to college.

He was engaged as a teacher in Illinois after leaving college until the spring of 1864, when he enlisted in the 137th Illinois Infantry.

In the month of June his regiment was ordered to Memphis, Tenn. In August, the rebel Gen. Forrest made a raid into the town and carried off a large number of prisoners, including Worman, who was attending his sick brother, a graduate of 1863. The prisoners endured the severest hardships and cruelty, to which at length George Worman succumbed. He died Oct. 27, 1864, at the age of 32, leaving the record of a good soldier and a true christian.

James Eleazer Bulkley, son of Geo. Bulkley, of Southport, died at St. Luke's Hospital, New York, October 18, 1864, aged 23 years. He was born in New York City, April 25, 1841. Immediately after leaving college he became a member of the Law School of Columbia College.

His death was occasioned by injuries received in an accident on the New York and New Haven Railroad, on the 10th of October.

Samuel Erwin Cooper, died at Cooper's Plains, Steuben Co., N. Y., Aug. 3, 1864, aged 23. He was the son of John Cooper, Jr., and was born at Cooper's Plains, Feb. 6, 1841.

At the time of his decease he was a member of the Law School of Columbia College.

Daniel Lathrop Coit, the second son of Daniel W., and Harriet F. Coit, of Norwich, was born in that town, Nov. 24, 1842, and died in the same place, June 1, 1865, aged 22 years.

Soon after his graduation, he was induced by patriotic motives, to engage himself for the winter as a relief-agent in the field service of the Sanitary Commission, but his strength was not adequate to this work, and while employed on the James River, he was seized with an illness from which he never recovered. He bore his protracted sufferings with Christian resignation, and died with the satisfaction of having done what he could for the cause of his country.

Howard Eben Pratt, son of Nathaniel J. Pratt, was born in Essex, Conn., Oct. 29, 1840.

He came to college from Williston Seminary.

He returned home after graduation, and devoted himself closely to his invalid father who was declining with consumption. The same disease was soon developed in himself, and he survived his father but three weeks, closing his life in Christian hope, February 21, 1865.

In addition to the names above recorded, the following deaths have been reported among the professional graduates of the College, not graduates of the Academical Department.

DOCTOR OF MEDICINE.

1825.

Hosea Edwards died in New Orleans, Feb. 27, 1865.

1831.

Adrian Russell Terry died in Chicago, Ill., Dec. 4, 1864. He was for a time Professor of Chemistry and Natural History in Bristol College, Penn.

1863.

Cyrus Humiston who came to the Medical School from Cheshire, was drowned in the Naugatuck river, August 5, 1863, at the age of 22 years.

BACHELOR OF LAW.

William Frederick Croswell died in New Haven in June, 1865.

BACHELOR OF PHILOSOPHY.

John Antoine Duvillard, died at Fort Hamilton, New York, on the 8th of May, 1865, aged 31 years. Lieut. D. was the son of John Duvillard, a native of Geneva, Swizerland, who, with many other young men, accompanied Joseph Bonaparte to Jefferson Co., New York, where they settled on his land. Lieut. D. was born at Cape Vincent, Jefferson Co., New York.

On the completion of his collegiate education, Mr. Duvillard visited Europe, spending much time with his relatives in Geneva; his paternal grandfather having been a distinguished Professor for upwards of forty years in the college at that city. On his return he went into merchantile business, and the manufacture of flour at Cape Vincent. On the breaking out of the rebellion, Mr. D. hastened to Providence, R. I., and joined the First Regiment Rhode Island Volunteers, under Colonel [afterwards General] Burnside, as a private. He was in the company of sharpshooters, at the battle of Bull Run, and remained in this regiment until it was disbanded, when he was appointed a Lieutenant in the 12th U. S. Infantry.

He was with his regiment in all the campaigns of the army of the Potomac, and was engaged in no less than sixteen pitched battles.

In the winter of 1863–4, when his regiment had become greatly reduced by losses in action, the officers were sent out on recruiting service. Lieut. Duvillard was sent to Ogdensburgh, New York, where, from his acquaintance along the border, he met with great success and obtained a larger number of recruits than any other officer, except the one in the city of New York. Soon after he took up his residence in Ogdensburg, his health began to give way from the effects of his severe and continued service. In March last he rejoined his regiment at Fort Hamilton, but so feeble that he was unable to do active duty. His health continued to fail until he died. Lieutenant Duvillard married the daughter of Hon. John R. Bartlett, Secretary of State of Rhode Island, who with one son survive him.

Total number of names recorded, 67.

Graduates of the Academic department, 62; average age, 55 years. Fourteen of this number, including almost all the younger persons, gave up their lives, it is believed, in the service of the country. Several other deaths, including a number at the South, have been reported to the necrologist, but without sufficient definiteness to be here recorded.

The oldest surviving graduates of the College are,—

Class of 1794 Hon. EZEKIEL BACON, of Utica.

" 1795 Rev. JEREMIAH DAY, D. D., of New Haven.
